TELLING THE VERMONT STORY
AS A GREAT PLACE TO WORK, LIVE AND DO BUSINESS

A 3-Year Economic Development Marketing Plan
To Attract and Retain Residents and Businesses to Vermont

May 16, 2016

Submitted by Development Counsellors International
Spike Advertising
TABLE OF CONTENTS

Executive Summary.................................................................Page 3
The Situation.................................................................Page 7
Goal................................................................................Page 9
Research and Discovery ................................................Page 9
Strategy........................................................................Page 17
Marketing Tactics........................................................Page 18
Execution Priorities and Timeline .................................Page 50
Metrics ........................................................................Page 55
Budget........................................................................Page 57
Acknowledgements.........................................................Page 60

Appendices
Appendix A – Immersion Tour Participants and Key Findings
Appendix B – Perception Surveys
Appendix C – Media Audit
Appendix D – Brandcensus Platform
Appendix E – Tips on Producing Infographic Videos
After a competitive RFP (request for proposal) process with the receipt of 13 proposals in Fall 2015, the Agency of Commerce and Community Development (ACCD) selected Development Counsellors International (DCI) of New York, NY and Spike Advertising of Alburgh, VT to develop a three-year economic development marketing plan for the State of Vermont.

The paring of the marketing agencies provided a powerful combination to coalesce the “inside” perspective on Vermont given Spike’s history working within the state and with the state itself, and an “outside” perspective afforded by DCI’s 55-plus years of working with economic development organizations around the U.S. The following is an executive summary that recaps three months of highly focused work:

Goal: To develop an economic development marketing plan to retain and attract residents and businesses to the state.

Research and Discovery: Through meetings or interviews with more than 100 companies, industry organizations, universities, public sector representatives, students, second-home owners and other entities; surveys of Vermont business owners, corporate executives in the Northeast and young professionals that yielded a total of 629 responses; and an audit of regional and national media coverage during the past year, the team synthesized key findings to inform the strategy and plan.
Strategy: The marketing strategy focuses on generating growth, with a focus on growing existing Vermont businesses, new Vermont businesses and Vermont’s workforce. To this end, the marketing plan outlines tactics to reach:
• Business owners in-state and in the Northeast and Eastern Canada
• Young professionals with an affinity for Vermont who currently live in the Northeast
• In-state influencers such as elected officials, news media and industry associations

Key Messages: Shaped by the brand mantra, “What a difference a state makes,” Vermont’s key message boils down to this: Vermont is where you can be different—live differently, work differently, do business differently. Here, you can make a life, a living, a profit ... and a difference.

Marketing Tactics: There is no silver bullet in economic development marketing. Instead, the plan outlines an integrated marketing approach, with a focus on earned and owned media given budget limitations, but also envisions what would be possible if additional funding is allocated.

Earned Media/Public Relations: The plan recommends pushing out a steady stream of positive Vermont business news to targeted in-state, trade and national media through proactive pitching; hosting press familiarization tours; and working to get more business-related content in Vermont Life, alumni magazines of Vermont colleges and universities, and resort publications.

New ThinkVermont Website: Using the ThinkVermont.com URL that the state already owns, ACCD needs to build a new website to tell Vermont’s success stories and provide a hub for content that inspires people to live, work and start or grow a business in Vermont.

Owned Media – Digital/Social Media: Vermont’s digital strategy should encompass a strong presence on Twitter, Instagram and Facebook, as well as the launch of a “Digital Ambassadors” program, which harnesses the social media networks of people who are passionate about Vermont, to spread positive messages to key target audiences. The plan also recommends a new ThinkVermont e-newsletter and planting success stories in existing Vermont e-newsletters.
Videos: The plan suggests creating five new success story videos to augment those already produced by ACCD; developing a campaign launch video and an infographic video; capturing video vignettes at Vermont business events; and repurposing existing video produced by others to stretch the budget.

Paid Media – Advertising: While pointing out that traditional advertising campaigns can quickly gobble up large sums of money, the plan recommends leveraging existing Department of Tourism & Marketing (VDTM) ad buys by incorporating business messaging in ads; using targeted Google AdWords; exploring a “trade deal” with Vermont Public Radio; testing quirky “wanted” ads in publications akin to Seven Days in target markets like Boston and New York; and exploring cooperative advertising.

Collateral: The plan suggests creating fresh “Why Vermont” collateral materials consistent in design and messaging with ThinkVermont.com to offer as downloads on your website and to use for meetings, events, trade shows and direct mail marketing.

Trade Shows and Events: Armed with a new ThinkVermont-branded pop-up and/or display, the Department of Economic Development (DED) should seek to have a presence at or sponsor targeted in-state events ranging from Young Professionals events and Tech Jam to events like the 2016 Women’s World Cup Ski Events.

Higher Education Outreach and Alumni Marketing: In addition to spotlighting successful apprenticeship programs, as well as products, research and companies spinning out of Vermont colleges and universities, we recommend harnessing the Governor to piggy-back on alumni events in New York City, Boston and other key markets to carry the ThinkVermont message directly to these important targets.

Direct Outreach for Business Retention and Expansion: To augment the work that DED does on a daily basis, we recommend that the Governor write hand-written thank-you notes to Vermont companies that are growing and host “Thank You for Investing” roundtables.

Big Ideas: Additional “big ideas” run the gamut from exploring partnership opportunities with Long Trail Brewing Co., Ben & Jerry’s and other Vermont brands that may be interested in helping to attract young professionals to the state to events/displays at Vermont Welcome Centers to a ThinkVermont bus and ski resort “takeovers.”

Execution Priorities and Timeline: The plan details a month-by-month timeline for executing the priority marketing tactics recommended for the 14 months from May 1, 2016 through June 30, 2017.

Budget: The budget provides a recommended allocation for the major marketing tactics over a three-year period.

Metrics: Realistic success metrics are suggested throughout the plan and synthesized as business development metrics (leads and inquiries, projects, jobs created/retained, capital investment) and marketing metrics (impressions, advertising equivalency, website visitors, click through rate, etc.).
A leader in the global tourism market, Vermont has built and burnished its brand for decades by astutely marketing the state as a four-season destination for visitors. The state is recognized and admired the world over for its beauty, recreational opportunities and other tourism offerings.

The time has now come to tell the “other side” of Vermont’s story. The state is rapidly developing a reputation as a place where entrepreneurs and innovators can succeed and where they can come to start and grow great businesses. Vermont needs to do more to promote the growth of its technology and advanced manufacturing sectors, its entrepreneurial spirit and its startup culture, as well as to bridge real or perceived gaps about the benefits of doing business in the state.

This is especially critical in view of Vermont’s aging population and shrinking workforce. Vermont has the second oldest, as well as second smallest, population of all U.S. states, with a median age at the end of 2014 of 42.8 years – lower only than Maine’s 44.1 median age. Exacerbating the problem of the aging population is a low birth rate – only Rhode Island’s is lower.

Vermont has a clear need to attract and retain more “young blood” to locate or remain in the state. According to a February 21, 2016 article in VT Digger, University of Vermont economics professor Art Woolf said a shortage of working-age people poses problems for the state’s economy, saying: “Businesses are going to have a harder time finding qualified workers. They aren’t going to be able to expand or they’ll expand someplace else or relocate. The economy is going to grow more slowly.”
Vermont needs to do more to attract more workers and more companies to the state. Simply put, there’s a pressing need to stimulate job growth in order to insure a healthy economy.

Vermont has traditionally focused most of its “outward” marketing on tourism – which, of course, is vital to the state’s economic health. Now, a sustained economic development marketing effort is needed to highlight the many positive features that make Vermont not only a great place to visit, but also a great place to live, work and do business. It’s crucial that the state allocate money and resources to economic development marketing on an ongoing basis – not just this one time – because stop-and-start programs get nowhere fast.

Nearly every other state in the nation has aggressive economic development marketing programs and significant budgets and staffing to support them. There’s not only a battle for business, there’s also a talent war being waged across America and beyond. If the current competitive landscape for talent and business attraction were a race, Vermont wouldn’t even be on the race track.

Some argue that Vermont would be waging a losing fight. We believe that to do nothing is dangerous. Marketing the state as an attractive place for companies and people to be in business can help generate leads, which can create jobs and employment, which produce income tax revenue, which ultimately supports the state’s general fund. If we can be successful in creating opportunity for Vermonters, we can reduce the dependence on public assistance.

There’s an urgent need for growth in Vermont. It’s that simple.

“
It’s crucial that the state allocate money and resources to economic development marketing on an ongoing basis – not just this one time – because stop-and-start programs get nowhere fast.

Source: State of Vermont
RESEARCH AND DISCOVERY

Goal

To develop an economic development marketing and communications plan to attract and retain people and businesses to the state.

Research & Discovery

To build a solid foundation for the development of a comprehensive economic development marketing plan for the State of Vermont, DCI and Spike Advertising conducted intensive research to uncover current perceptions of Vermont as a place to work, run a business, live and raise a family—both from an inside and outside perspective. Our collaborative efforts encompassed the following:

Immersion Tours: During the course of five days, DCI, Spike and ACCD met with more than 90 private companies, industry organizations, universities, public sector representatives and other entities in roundtables and one-on-one meetings to better understand the state’s strengths, weakness, opportunities and threats. See Appendix A for the full list of participants and key findings.

In-State Business Survey: ACCD distributed an online survey, which was developed by DCI, to an internal database of businesses located throughout the state. A total of 343 respondents accessed the survey during January-February 2016 and provided in-depth and thoughtful input on the strengths, as well as the challenges, facing the state. See Appendix B for an executive summary and details.
Corporate Executive Survey: DCI distributed a slightly different survey aimed at garnering the perceptions of corporate executives in the Northeast. A total of 41 out-of-state business executives responded to the survey. See Appendix B for an executive summary and details.

Young Professional Survey: Through digital and social media channels, ACCD, DCI and Spike distributed a third survey tailored to out-of-state young professionals between the ages of 20 and 35. Responses to this survey totaled 217. See Appendix B for an executive summary and details.

Media Audit: DCI conducted an analysis of 175 articles in national and in-state news outlets published over the course of the past year (January-December 2015) to see what stories and issues were most frequently being covered by the media and if the tone was positive, negative or neutral. See Appendix C for details.

Brandcensus Interviews: To further define and refine key messaging beyond what was learned in the immersion tours and through the surveys, Spike conducted an additional 24 in-person or telephone interviews with business owners, influencers, entrepreneurs, young professionals, second-home owners, students and recent graduates of Vermont colleges/universities and ACCD stakeholders. See Appendix D for details.

When assimilated as a whole, the discovery work yielded these 10 key findings and recommendations that inform our strategy and marketing tactics to follow:

1. Make growth Vermont’s number one priority. Although “growth” is a dirty word to some Vermonters, it must be the state’s top priority. The marketing plan needs to: address population growth (Vermont’s aging population and workforce gap); support the growth of startups and entrepreneurial businesses; and grow the number of out-of-state-businesses that relocate and start-up here. Many Vermonters believe that the state should focus on attracting people not businesses, but we believe that the latter should not be ignored. Organic growth and creating the proper environment in which businesses can flourish is a challenge that Vermont should wholly embrace.
2. Amplify Vermont’s tech and advanced manufacturing stories. Less than 10% of the corporate executives or young professionals surveyed associated either information technology or advanced manufacturing with Vermont, yet the state is home to a promising technology sector with jobs going unfilled. During the course of our immersion tour, we also encountered a disconnect between the perceived lack of jobs in the state and the reality that a surprising number of tech businesses and advanced manufacturers are desperately looking to hire. Vermont’s tech and advanced manufacturing story must be told in a bigger, louder way. Our media audit underscored this point: tech is the single most popular topic in top-tier media coverage of Vermont. The media loves that Vermont is both quirky and innovative—particularly when that innovation is related to agriculture, sustainability and other things for which Vermont is already known. Vermont is also becoming increasingly well-known as the home of innovative entrepreneurs and startups to watch.

In addition, Vermont fared very well in two tech-related rankings released in 2015; the state ranked #5 among states with the most startup activity according to a study by the Kaufmann Foundation, covered in Fortune, and Burlington ranked #9 among the nation’s most innovative tech hubs, according to a NerdWallet study, covered by Forbes.

There are many technology and advanced manufacturing companies thriving in Vermont. These businesses, as well as other tech entrepreneurs, should be showcased in the state’s marketing efforts – through earned media, success stories on a new website, digital/social media and by maximizing events like Tech Jam.

“Less than 10% of the corporate executives or young professionals surveyed associated either information technology or advanced manufacturing with Vermont, yet the state is home to a promising technology sector with jobs going unfilled.
3. Leverage the success of Vermont’s iconic companies. Unless prompted, very few people mentioned Vermont’s biggest or most iconic companies – Keurig Green Mountain, Ben & Jerry’s, Simon Pearce, Vermont Teddy Bear, Burton, Cabot, National Life and IBM when asked to name successful companies in the state. Vermont needs to take more credit for and celebrate the companies that were born, took root and grew in Vermont as a way of inspiring other entrepreneurs. Their founders – and their stories – also need to be harnessed through marketing.

4. Focus on Vermont’s “sweet spot” for attracting workers and entrepreneurs. Based on our discovery work, we believe that Vermont’s “sweet spot” for attracting workers can be refined and defined as follows:

   - 28-40 Year Old Age Span: Although trying to “capture” some of the 40,000 students that Vermont imports each year to attend its colleges and universities has been suggested by many, we believe a more receptive audience will be those in the 28-40 year old age group who have perhaps gone off to work in urban areas, as millennials are prone to do; have gained some business experience; and are now ready to get out of the “rat race” or “settle down” before they start a family. These are not slackers, but young professionals who want to continue to advance their careers or start their own business in a setting where they will be bigger fish in a smaller pond and can perhaps help make a difference. Vermont should narrow its focus to begin by targeting those currently living in the Northeast corridor.

   - A Drop of Vermont: There was strong consensus that Vermont’s best bet is to target people who have a “drop of Vermont” in them. That can be defined by those who grew up or lived in the state, went to college or camp in Vermont, or vacationed here. We met several “boomerangs” – men and women who had returned to Vermont after moving away – who confirmed the strong pull to come home.

   - Outdoor Enthusiasts: It’s clear that Vermont has a national reputation as an outdoor paradise and that people are drawn to the state for that reason. Like those who want to live in Colorado to hike, bike, ski and enjoy the great outdoors with other recreational pursuits, people in the Northeast that place a high priority on access to the outdoors – and may not want to move West – should be targeted. Many outdoor enthusiasts also want to embrace a healthier lifestyle by being closer to sustainable, organic or local food sources – another area where Vermont excels.
5. Balance Vermont’s lifestyle assets with messaging that job and career opportunities exist. A key theme that emerged from the findings all three surveys is that Vermont is perceived highly from a lifestyle perspective, but that Vermont is not a “top of mind” location for advancing your career or growing a business.

Despite the challenges faced, Vermonters understand that they have a very strong lifestyle brand upon which they can build future marketing efforts. In-state survey respondents believe the greatest opportunity for growth lies with educating businesses (both in- and out-of-state) as well as current residents on the advantages of growing your business or career in Vermont. By correcting any misperceptions and further educating these audiences on the importance of economic growth in Vermont, they believe that Vermont can achieve success not only as a tourism destination, but also as a location for other industry sectors.

Likewise, the young professionals surveyed have a positive perception about some aspects of Vermont’s lifestyle (“beautiful, nature, green, peaceful, laid back” and “friendly”), but they also offer associations such as “remote, cold, small” and “lack of work.” This translated into a mixed response regarding whether respondents would be willing to relocate to Vermont if a position that matched their skill and salary requirements was offered to them. Approximately 58% of respondents report that they would be willing to relocate to Vermont, while 42% would not be willing to relocate.

Marketing efforts must help remove the barriers to workers relocating by promoting the fact that Vermont does have jobs, the state is not as remote as many people think, and thriving cities, towns and villages exist amongst more rural areas.
6. Market what is “right” about the state now. In both the surveys and during the immersion tour, Vermont businesses were quick to point to lack of affordable housing, public transportation, healthcare access, high taxes, excessive regulations, the overall cost of doing business, and a host of other problems as barriers to growth.

Out-of-state executives specifically identified the following as perceived weaknesses of doing business in Vermont:

- Availability of skilled workers
- Competitive utility costs
- Telecommunications infrastructure
- Accessibility to interstates, airports and ports
- Corporate tax rate
- State & local incentives
- Proximity to customers/suppliers

Due to those perceived shortcomings, Vermont is generally perceived less favorably than other competitor states including New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine and New York. In fact, 32% of the corporate respondents had considered the state for a new facility, but of these, only 17% ended up locating the project in Vermont.

Given Vermont’s lack of marketing that specifically targets the business community, there is tremendous opportunity to create messaging that will elevate Vermont’s profile as a good place to grow businesses. We must market what is “right” about Vermont now and not get hamstrung by what is “wrong” – leaving those issues for the state to tackle over the longer term.
7. Be aggressive about reaching out to business owners – both in-state and out of state. Retention and expansion of your existing businesses is job #1 for Vermont. Research has shown that 60-80% of all new jobs come from existing businesses. Knowing your in-state companies and their challenges, opportunities and hot button issues is crucial to keeping and growing businesses in the Green Mountain State. Several of the marketing tactics will be aimed at both communicating with and showcasing the successes of Vermont companies.

In terms of out-of-state companies, we recommend focusing on the following:

- Companies in the Northeast, as well as Eastern Canada that may need a U.S. foothold, especially for U.S. defense contracts
- Businesses that align with your existing industries: green/clean tech, value-added agrifood and beverage, IT, advanced manufacturing and defense contracting
- Captive insurance companies, for which Vermont is already a national leader

8. Educate influencers about “good news” happening with Vermont businesses. Vermont’s success in retaining, attracting and growing businesses hinges on a better understanding among key influencers of the positive things happening around the state in terms of its business climate. Chambers, Regional Development Corporations (RDCs), elected officials and the news media need to be fed a steady stream of “good news” so they aren’t the first to be so negative about the state. Vermonters are often your own worst enemy.

Whether coming to Vermont for business or pleasure, visitors to the state need to be left with positive impressions about the state’s business climate. Likewise, second-home owners – although tougher to reach directly – are important in terms of shaping impressions with your primary audiences. Finally, students, parents and alumni are key influencers who should not be forgotten in Vermont’s marketing efforts.
9. Communicate the brand mantra “What a difference a state makes.”
Vermont’s key message boils down to this: Vermont is where you can be different—live differently, work differently, do business differently. Here, you can make a life, a living, a profit ... and a difference. These brand attributes should be woven throughout all marketing messages:

- Vermont’s small scale fosters opportunities for individuals and businesses to make a meaningful impact on things that matter to them and to access decision-makers with influence.
- Vermont is forward thinking. Innovation doesn’t happen by accident; Vermont is purposefully conscientious—environmentally, socially and culturally.
- Vermont is beautiful and bold, with natural beauty and seasonal diversity that are a joy to behold and easy to access.
- Vermont is home to many remarkable brands and extraordinary businesses because we foster originality, respect quality, and bring out the best in people.
- Vermont fosters a strong entrepreneurial spirit. Start-up, emerging and innovative businesses thrive here with community and government support, and collaboration among colleagues.
- Vermont is safe and sound, and Vermonters are relaxed and respectful.

10. Stretch scarce resources to implement a long-term economic development marketing plan. Not only is Vermont’s $200,000 allocated budget very low to develop and implement a three-year marketing economic development marketing plan, it is also clear that ACCD’s staff is spread very thin in terms of having the bandwidth to execute a plan.

Even with strategic reallocation of people and resources, Vermont will need to be very smart about how to leverage work created by others – including Vermont PBS, Vermont Public Radio, Vermont Life and other entities telling Vermont’s stories – through earned and owned media. In addition, Vermont residents are clearly passionate about their state and can become an army of “Digital Ambassadors” that can spread key messages far and wide at low cost with third-party credibility. It may also prove prudent to outsource some of the marketing tactics to make sure they get executed in a timely and efficient manner.
Our marketing strategy focuses on generating growth, with a focus on growing:

- Existing Vermont businesses
- New Vermont businesses
- Vermont’s workforce

To this end, our marketing plan outlines tactics to reach:

- Business owners in-state and in the Northeast and Eastern Canada
- Young professionals with an affinity for Vermont who currently live in the Northeast
- In-state influencers such as elected officials, news media and industry associations

Our messaging is authentic and positions Vermont as a place to live, work and do business with a purpose. It promises that Vermont is a state where you can be different and make a life, a living, a profit and a difference.
MARKETING TACTICS

Following are our recommendations for strategic tactics for an integrated economic development marketing plan for the State of Vermont. The following plan is laid out as we would execute it in an ideal world—where budget and staff resources are no object. In the sections that follow, we will prioritize and attach estimated budgets to all major activities—but, first, we want to give a sense of what would be optimal.

Earned Media – Public Relations

According to DCI’s 2014 Winning Strategies in Economic Development Marketing survey findings, the leading source of information influencing executive perceptions of an area’s business climate is dialogue with industry peers, followed by articles in newspapers and magazines. A positive write-up in a top-tier national business outlet is the ultimate third-party endorsement—and one of your most powerful tools when it comes to shifting perceptions about Vermont as a place to live and work.

But securing interest from top-tier media can be challenging. As a general rule, the story you’re telling has either to align with or stand out against a national trend, include a timely announcement or event with broad significance, or include some level of controversy. On top of that, an existing relationship with a journalist is often imperative to get your pitch read in the first place.

Because of this, the goal should not be to land Vermont in the New York Times and Wall Street Journal every other week, but rather to establish and maintain a steady stream of positive coverage in trade, industry and other news media, while simultaneously developing your storylines and building relationships with top-tier contacts so you’re ready to pitch and secure positive media coverage when the time is right.
Proactive Pitching

We recommend a “ready-aim-fire” approach to proactive media relations:

Ready:
• Build out storylines—Make sure you have the “latest and greatest” data, rankings, facts and stories in your tool belt. The more “best, first and only” claims you can make based on hard data, the more compelling your storylines will be to media. Look for surprises and counter-intuitive storylines.

Based on our research, here are four “starter” storylines for pitching Vermont proactively to national business and trade media. (Note: Example companies are just that – examples. Others should be identified and added, with the list constantly being refined.)

1. Why Entrepreneurs are Growing their Startups in Vermont: The Green Mountain State is growing entrepreneurs these days like they do trees. In fact, Vermont ranked No. 5 in the nation for startup activity and No. 3 for the rate of new entrepreneurs last year, according to the Kauffman Foundation’s 2015 Index of Startup Activity. Many of the innovative companies that started and grew in Vermont thanks to the state’s startup culture dream of growing big, like Ben & Jerry’s, Keurig Green Mountain, Burton and Vermont Teddy Bear Company—all of which got their start in the state. It’s no wonder—for entrepreneurs looking to master the work-life balance, Vermont may be the ideal place to get started. Thanks to the state’s collaborative tech community and world-class lifestyle amenities—from skiing and hiking to microbrewery and locavore scenes—entrepreneurs are taking a cue from Vermont CEOs who decided to grow their own businesses in Vermont.

Dealer.com Office; Source: Vermont Economic Development Authority
2. Vermont’s Agriculture Sector Spurs Economic Growth: With the highest sales from agricultural production ($776 million) in New England, Vermont is a leader in agriculture. Vermont food products are in high demand nationally; the state produces 41% of the nation’s maple crop—making it the national leader—and 63% of all milk in New England. Vermont also ranks first in the nation for craft breweries per capita and is regularly recognized for its award-winning cheeses from companies like Jasper Hill, Cabot Creamery Cooperative, Parish Hill Creamery, Spring Brook Farm, Sweet Rowen Farmstead and Vermont Shepherd. The sector is now stronger than ever. Since the state began implementing the Farm to Plate Strategic Plan five years ago, Vermont has added 5,387 food system jobs—which now total 63,398—and increased food system gross sales by 32% and value added food manufacturing by 58%. Over the past year alone, 23 new meat facilities and 20 new dairy processing facilities came online, fueling continued sustainable growth in the state’s thriving agriculture sector.

3. Vermont Proves a Leader in Renewable Energy: With its progressive inhabitants and environmentally friendly policies, Vermont has become a national leader in renewable energy. Burlington recently became the first U.S. city to run entirely on renewable electricity. And despite its small size, the city already has nine charging stations for electric vehicles. This trend extends to the entire state, which has 10 times the amount of solar power it did in 2010 and 20 times the wind energy. The state’s economy, which has seen a boom in solar jobs, reflects this continued growth. Vermont has the third-most solar industry jobs per capita of any state, according to a report published by national non-profit The Solar Foundation. Green Mountain Power, the state’s largest utility, also recently became the first U.S. utility to sell batteries from electric car company Tesla to its customers—just one of the new technologies the utility has embraced to deliver clean power and low carbon products to the state’s progressive customer base, as well as the world over.

Source: VermontVacation.com
4. In Vermont, Manufacturing Reinvents Itself: Home to major operations of Global Foundries, GE Aviation and GW Plastics, Vermont is growing a new generation of advanced manufacturers. Homegrown Vermont companies BioTek Instruments, Vermont Precision Tools and Chroma Technology, among others, are driving innovation in the sector, which accounts for approximately 11% of state GDP. Traditional manufacturers are also reinventing themselves. Cabot Hosiery Mills, for example, has invested millions in a 19th-century mill in Northfield, VT and launched a cheeky marketing campaign for its “Darn Tough” socks that are being sold at a brisk pace by EMS, REI and other top outdoor gear retailers.

- Make sure you’re in on business announcements—Encourage companies, local chambers and RDCs and industry leaders to send business news your way in advance and offer to partner on pushing out newsworthy announcements to relevant trade and national media. This is also a great way to build out your network of potential spokespeople so you can offer media interviews with specific contacts in your outreach and gives them a boost in their own media relations efforts.

- Add to VDTM’s clipping service to look for business-oriented stories—As we learned in our media audit, Vermont may be generating positive coverage in the national media, but it’s not always played back at home—or played up at all, for that matter. To change this, the first step is to make sure positive business coverage of the state is always on your radar. Asking VDTM to add business coverage to their clipping service is a great first step to ensuring you catch good news as it happens.

Aim:

- Know your media—Zero in on “most wanted” national and trade outlets and specific journalists that might be interested in covering your stories. Monitor top-tier media especially closely to see where your storylines might fit into national trends or a specific journalists’ coverage areas.

Based on Vermont’s storylines and target audiences, we recommend targeting the following national business and trade publications as a starting point in your proactive media outreach. Trade outlets, which are easier to penetrate than national, top-tier outlets, are a great starting point to begin to secure a steady stream of coverage. We’ve added an asterisk next to those we believe should be your top 10 targets to begin.
National
Bloomberg News
Boston Globe*
Boston Herald
Business Insider
BuzzFeed
CNNMoney
Entrepreneur*
Fast Company
Forbes
Fortune
Inc.*
MarketWatch
Mashable
New York Times
NPR
Reuters
The Atlantic
The Daily Beast
TheStreet
USA Today
Wall Street Journal
Wired

Site Selection Trade Area Development*
Business Facilities*
BusinessXpansion Journal
Expansion Management
SITE Selection*
Trade & Industry
Development
Urban Land Magazine

Manufacturing Trade
Assembly Magazine
Automation World
Engineering News-Record
IndustryWeek*
Industry Today
Machine Design
Manufacturing & Distribution
Executive
Manufacturing News
Manufacturing Today*
Material Handling & Logistics
Popular Mechanics

Renewable Energy Trade
Breaking Energy
EnergyBiz
Greentech Media*
GreenBiz
North American Clean Energy
Power Magazine
Renewable Energy World
Renewable Energy Magazine
SmartGridNews
Sun and Wind Energy
Treehugger
Triple Pundit
Wind Systems Magazine

Agriculture & Food Trade
Beer Advocate
Cheese Reporter
Craft Beer & Brewing*
Dairy Foods
Food Logistics
Food Manufacturing
Food Processing
Food Technology
Meat + Poultry
Specialty Food
The Brewing Network
The Progressive Farmer
The Beer Connoisseur

Tech Trade & Online
BetaNews
CNET.com
Engadget
The Information
InformationWeek
InfoWorld
ITWorld
Motherboard (Vice)
MIT Technology Review
Network Computing
Network World
TechCrunch
TechNewsWorld
Tech Republic
Tech Cocktail
The Verge
VentureBeat
• Position yourself as a resource—Push out big company and industry announcements to relevant trade outlets, offering more information and/or interviews with specific contacts. Even if this doesn’t result in a placement, it puts you on their radar as a resource for future coverage. This kind of outreach should be done sparingly with top-tier reporters, who should get only your biggest and best news.

Fire:

• Strike while the iron is hot—With a robust set of storylines and spokespeople and a network of targeted journalist contacts, you’ll be ready to make the most of big announcements in-state and national trends relevant to Vermont’s storylines. Here are just a few tips for cultivating and courting reporters:

  • Be a student: Know your top media targets and their reporters – what kinds of stories do they cover; what are their beats; what kinds of stories have they covered in your target industries; are their certain sections of the publications you can see your story appearing?

  • Get personal: Almost every story begins with an interesting person. Make sure you illuminate the interesting/quirky personalities and people behind Vermont’s business success stories. Paint a picture of how they got started and are succeeding. Make it something you’d be interested in reading.

  • Use flattery: Follow bylines and if you see a story you like/find interesting, don’t be afraid to reach out to the reporter to compliment him or her on the story. Be specific about what caught your interest. They are likely to be more receptive when you pitch them the next time.

  • Be ready when they are: Have your ducks in a row with stats, interview contacts and other information for when the reporter is ready; nothing kills story faster than a long lag time. They’re on to the next story.

  • Be persistent but not pesky: Reporters are inundated with pitches that quickly drop down to their bottom of their email inbox. Never follow-up with “Did you get my pitch,” but rather forward your original pitch with a new tidbit of information, a slightly different angle.
• Leverage good news, in and out of state—When Vermont secures a positive story or ranking in a targeted outlet, it’s a great opportunity to generate excitement both in and out of state. Extend the reach of the positive coverage by:

A. Pushing it out to local media and/or relevant trade publications
B. Posting a tweet using relevant hashtags and an image, if applicable
C. Creating a news item for your website and pushing it out through your e-newsletters and other social channels, if the news warrants

!FORTUNE

Home Depot Likes This Crunchy Vermont Gardening Startup

_by Daniel Roberto_ · _@modemuse_ · _DECEMBER 30, 2016, 7:44 PM EST_

!Vermont Economic Dev

_Vermont gardening #startup helps urban #millennials grow gardens at home for $30# ThinkVermont_
Press Familiarization Trips

One of the best ways to guarantee positive coverage is to invite a targeted group of journalists to visit the state for a familiarization tour. We recommend arranging for 3-5 journalists to visit Vermont for 2-3 days of meetings that revolve around a specific industry or strength. When ACCD proposed this tactic in its original work, a “Tech and Taps” theme was suggested to combine the state’s business and tourism assets. We think this is an excellent strategy to showcase Vermont’s thriving tech and microbrewery scenes as well as a great opportunity to combine resources with VDTM to achieve positive lifestyle and business coverage for the state.

With this kind of broad theme, Vermont could aim to secure a mix of trade reporters and top-tier journalists with relevant interests to attend the trip. In subsequent years, an industry-focused trip targeting trade media in agriculture, renewable energy or manufacturing could also be very effective.
Leverage Vermont Life, Resort Publications and Alumni Magazines

Capitalize on Vermont Life: Vermont is fortunate to have a first-class publication like Vermont Life that already has a highly targeted readership with an affinity for the state. Although we applaud the new “Next” feature on the next-to-back page, which showcases an innovative company each issue, we think the magazine could do more to feature interesting businesses and entrepreneurs around the state, as well as to paint a picture of what regular life is like in cities and towns for people who live and work in Vermont.

Similar to a current feature in Yankee magazine, Vermont Life could develop a regular feature called “Could You Work Here?” or “Could You Live Here?” that would showcase cool companies and communities in Vermont. These would leverage the talents of Vermont Life writers and photographers and could be repurposed in all or part on a new ThinkVermont website, e-newsletters, etc.

Infiltrate Resort Magazines: Nearly every resort in Vermont publishes its own glossy magazine, which is placed in every hotel room and distributed at consumer trade shows. We recommend that VDTM reach out to the resorts to see about accepting contributed content for their next issues about interesting companies that are thriving “behind the scenes” in communities that surround and support the resorts. Again, we believe the Vermont Life team could be harnessed to research, write and deliver photos for ready-made content for the resorts.

Profile Successful Vermont Businesses in Alumni Magazines: As a way to inspire other graduates to think about returning to Vermont to start or expand their business, ACCD should work with the communications departments at Vermont colleges and universities to identify alumni who have either stayed or returned to the state to work, live and start or grow a business.

Source: Nedde Real Estate
A New ThinkVermont Website

In order to build a solid foundation for a long-term marketing plan, the state must have a robust online presence that serves both as a resource and an effective marketing tool.

If you start a Google search for key phrases like “work in Vermont” and “live in Vermont,” job sites like Indeed, Monster and JobsInVT.com currently turn up, or articles from Movoto on the “Best and Worst Places to Live in Vermont”—but no site where Vermont is actively telling its own unique and positive stories. If a young professional or business does happen to find their way to the current Department of Economic Development (DED) site, it’s more likely that the look of the government site will be more of a “turn off” than a “turn on.”

This is where Vermont is missing the boat. The Internet has become an integral part of how people make decisions. Today, most people won’t even dine at a restaurant without an investigatory Google search—let alone make the decision to move to a new state.

Using the ThinkVermont.com URL that DED already owns, a new website could be the perfect vehicle through which to tell Vermont’s success stories. It should live as its own site – dedicated to content that inspires people to live, work and start a business in Vermont. Without it, the state has no real hub for great resources like the video success stories DED is creating and no good platform to drive traffic to through media relations, social-digital initiatives, special events, collateral materials and other marketing initiatives.

The new ThinkVermont.com website would not duplicate or replace DED’s portion of the current ACCD website. Detailed content on specific incentive programs, funding opportunities, etc. would remain on the “government” website and be linked to as appropriate. The ThinkVermont.com website would instead be a new gateway to that content, providing an opportunity to first sell the state from a big-picture perspective with effective marketing specifically as the goal.
With that in mind, here are 10 recommendations for creating the ThinkVermont.com website.

1. Create a Content Hub for Vermont Success Stories and Videos
   Showcasing Vermont’s leading employers and entrepreneurs is a great way to show website visitors, not only that everything from small startups to major companies are already thriving in the state, but that strong business and industry networks exist in Vermont.

   As noted, ThinkVermont.com should serve not as a replacement for DED’s current online presence, but as a complimentary platform for pushing out these success stories. As proposed, this website could also serve as a one-stop-shop for relocation resources.

2. Create Simple, Engaging Content
   We recommend keeping copy “short and sweet,” drawing the site visitor in and linking to DED and other resources for more in-depth information. Include clear “calls to action” to learn more, subscribe to the e-newsletter, connect on social media, etc. The “voice,” as well as the copy, should reflect Vermont’s unique character and value proposition and not be stilted government speak. Make it authentic and “different.”

3. Highlight Key Industries
   Vermont’s leading industries—including agriculture, tech, energy and advanced manufacturing—have strong stories to tell about Vermont as a place to live, work and start/grow a business. Tout your top industry sectors with a dedicated page for each. As with all other content, these can be “short and sweet” with plenty of links and downloads from resources like the Agency of Agriculture, Food & Markets, the Vermont Technology Alliance and the Vermont Manufacturing Extension Center. Clearly identify the sector’s strategic advantages and feature logos and success stories for the top employers within each sector to demonstrate a robust industry network.

Source: State of Vermont
4. Think Modern, Fresh Design
   High-quality photos, balanced with an appropriate amount of “white space,” bold colors and text is a great recipe for modern, fresh web design. Whenever possible, use images and infographics to visually communicate Vermont’s creative, entrepreneurial spirit and innovative qualities, rather than through blocks of text.

5. Take Stock of Image Resources
   Using large, crisp images is a great way to enhance your website — especially when those images feature the unique entrepreneurs, businesses and visually stunning landscapes found in Vermont. Vermont has a great visual story to tell and ThinkVermont.com should take advantage of that. Paint a picture what life is like in Vermont with photos of downtowns, kids walking to school, young techies biking to work, people hanging out in a coffee shop or bar, etc.

   Develop a resource bank of dynamic, high-resolution photos for your website and other marketing materials. Capitalize on existing photos in the image banks of Vermont Life, VDTM, chambers, RDCs, local companies, organizations and photographers—then decide if additional photography is necessary.

6. Consider User Experience
   As a rule, visitors should be able to find what they’re looking for on your site within one to two clicks of the home page. Another major component of user-friendly experience is responsiveness across mobile devices. Smartphones and iPads are among the most popular devices for browsing the Internet and your site should be built with that in mind.
7. Spread the Good News
Keep visitors up-to-date on what’s going on in Vermont by posting all the latest announcements, events and accolades to your site on an ongoing basis. As you saw in our media audit, Vermont technology and innovation was featured prominently in top-tier news outlets last year. This kind of success should be featured prominently on your website and used as an opportunity to spread your key messages.

Funnelling news through your website also allows the opportunity to influence the tone of news that’s being disseminated locally. Some media outlets like VTDigger.org and Vermont Business Magazine may take a neutral to negative stance on incentives awards, but ThinkVermont.com can highlight the job creation and investment that the state will see as a result of a VEGI (Vermont Employment Growth Incentive) award. When posting big news to social media, link directly to the news item to drive traffic to your site and direct visitors to the “positive version” of the story.

8. Get Social
Feature a live feed of #ThinkVermont Twitter activity on your homepage to showcase your latest tweets. Make sure social icons are prominent on your site so it’s easy for users to connect to and follow your social platforms.

9. Provide Comprehensive Contact Information
It should be as easy as possible for site visitors to get in touch with the right contacts to get more information. When they’re ready to make that call, they should be able to get on the phone or a direct email conversation with the right contact—ideally within one click from the homepage. Make sure to provide comprehensive contact details (direct phone, e-mail, title) along with a photo of the right contact so site visitors know exactly who they’re talking to.

10. Follow SEO Best Practices
One of the biggest challenges that websites face today is maintaining relevance in the eyes of the search engines. It’s widely accepted that if you’re not in the top two or three search results, you’re losing out on site visitors, which is why SEO (search engine optimization) is arguably one of the most important aspects of web design. Start with comprehensive keyword research and integrate them into your title tags, meta descriptions and page content. Create unique page descriptions to stand out from the pack of results and use keyword-rich alt-text to insure that your images aren’t ignored or devalued by search engine spiders.
Owned Media – Digital/Social Media

A strong digital strategy is vital to conveying Vermont’s overall message as a great place to live, work and start a business. Digital/social media has the dual benefit of being lower cost than most traditional earned or paid media and of being highly targeted. In fact, it would be good for ACCD to explore working with one Vermont company we met in particular – Faraday.com – which offers a data-driven marketing platform for predictive targeting.

An analysis of current user-generated content on Vermont on Twitter, LinkedIn and Facebook during a one-month period revealed that people are indeed posting about Vermont on social media. If Bernie Sanders and tourism-specific posts are excluded, business and tech are among the top themes that emerge in a key word search for Vermont—though 55% of business-related posts and 66% of tech-related posts are coded as negative. But that doesn’t negate that fact that there are lots of positive business and tech posts out there—hundreds of them, in fact.

Similarly, an analysis of top themes that emerge from a #Vermont search reveals that posts using the hashtags #Vermont, #VT, #vermontlife and #vtlife are largely positive—as are posts about Vermont as it relates to agriculture, local food and real estate. And though it falls slightly lower on the list, the hashtag #LetsGrowVT promoted by the Vermont Chamber of Commerce surfaced as one of the top 25 themes, meaning that it’s been effective in penetrating the social-digital sphere with positive posts about Vermont.

Top Themes for Vermont on Social Media

Keyword Search:

![Keyword Search Diagram]

#Vermont Search:

![#Vermont Search Diagram]
All of that is to say that the conversation is already happening—and will continue to happen with or without ACCD’s involvement. From our perspective, it’s now ACCD’s job, not only to join the conversation, but to contribute to it in meaningful ways. As we saw in the case of the Vermont Chamber of Commerce’s efforts, it is indeed possible to have an impact on the social-digital sphere with consistent posting and a single hashtag. With that in mind, here are our recommendations on how to strengthen your social-digital presence.

Twitter

With more than 140 million active users and over 340 million tweets a day, Twitter is a social media network that Vermont should not overlook—and one that we recommend focusing on over LinkedIn and Facebook, at least for the time being. It’s one of the simplest and most effective ways to keep your website content relevant and to push out positive news about the state—plus it’s a great way to join in the positive conversations that are already happening in the state.

Taking a page from VDTM’s highly successful @ThisisVT Twitter program which has more than 11,200 followers, here are our recommendations to take your Twitter presence to the next level.

Develop Social-Digital Voice

Vermont’s unique character is one of its strongest selling points, as it sets it apart from other locations. Your social-digital voice should reflect that and help to tell Vermont’s stories in an authentic way. It’s also a low-cost way to spread your messages to targeted audiences.

Ramp up #ThinkVermont

Currently, a search for #ThinkVermont on Twitter turns up just five posts. From our perspective, this hashtag presents a great opportunity, both to solidify and continue to communicate your key messages, and to join forces with the people, businesses and organizations that are already putting out great social content.

In order for a hashtag to have a meaningful impact, it’s important to post consistently and encourage others to use it through social-digital campaigns and events. As a point of reference, our social media audit revealed that the Vermont Chamber of Commerce posted or contributed to 38 posts using the hashtag #LetsGrowVT in the course of just one month. By extension, it’s a good idea to post with #ThinkVermont at least once per business day and ideally more often.
Use Multi-Media
Mixing more high-resolution photos, videos and other visual elements into your social posts is a proven strategy for increasing engagement. In fact, Buffer reported that for its user base, tweets with images earned 150% more retweets and 18% more clicks than tweets without images. If the article you’re tweeting includes a striking image, include it as part of your tweet. If not, consider tapping into your photo resources to make your post more visual.

Shortening your links is another easy (and free) way to make your social content cleaner and more visually appealing. Tools like Bitly or Google URL Shortener are helpful for streamlining your posts.

Here are some examples of how to take your presence on Twitter to the next level:

Be a Reliable Resource
If you become a resource to your key audiences, your following will naturally grow. Part of being a resource is posting consistently. As we said previously, aim for at least once a day, but posting five times a day is not excessive. Schedule evergreen content that promotes your website and videos in advance and mix in timely news to ensure consistent posting.
Digital Ambassadors Program

The importance of user-generated content cannot be overstated, especially when seeking to reach and attract young professionals, technology companies, entrepreneurs and investors.

With that in mind, we recommend a grassroots campaign that galvanizes these audiences by using Vermont’s online influencers to communicate the state’s unique story. Dubbed the “Vermont Digital Ambassadors,” the program would use Vermont businesses, community leaders, entrepreneurs and other Vermont-loving influencers from in and out of state to share business announcements, national media placements and other information that reflects well on Vermont as a great place to live, work, start and grow a business, and raise a family through their own networks. Messages are amplified to hundreds or thousands of others and, because they are coming from a friend or connection, the content has more credibility than coming straight from the State.

A Digital Ambassadors program is a great strategy, both for spreading news among outside audiences and out-of-staters with a “drop of Vermont” in them that may be interested in serving as ambassadors, as well as for connecting with in-state companies and influencers.

We recommend taking the following steps to launch the program.

• Develop a Visual Identity: The Vermont Digital Ambassadors should employ a visual identity that ties to your key messages, state of Vermont brand standards and is stylistically consistent with your website and social-digital platforms.

• Build Your Digital Army: Results from the in-state business survey revealed that 46% of respondents would volunteer as a “state ambassador” should a program of this type be developed—meaning there’s a pool of potential ambassadors waiting to be tapped. Assemble a “digital army” of the people passionate about living and working in the state to help tell Vermont’s economic development stories to a larger social-digital audience. Identify individuals with a passion for Vermont and a large following through research and network outreach. From there, continue to recruit ambassadors at events and through your social-digital channels. Here are some examples of potential Vermont Digital Ambassadors.
• Create Engaging Content: Push out positive news about Vermont by providing ready-made social content for your ambassadors. Compose a short description of the news and posts for Twitter, Facebook and LinkedIn, linking to a news item on ThinkVermont.com. See the mock example we’ve created for the Cabot Hosiery expansion.

• Measure Success: Measure effectiveness of the program by tracking email open rate and post engagement; tweak content as necessary. Aim to send between two and four posts per month, with a focus on the quality and “share-ability” of the news, rather than the quantity of posts to ensure that you’re seen as a resource, not a source of spam.

---

Instagram

Frequented by young professionals, Instagram is a great platform from which to reach that target audience—which is why economic development organizations are taking a cue from consumer companies and establishing an Instagram presence to grow their brand and attract talent.

Vermont’s scenic landscapes, cultural amenities and innovative businesses lend themselves very well to pictures and videos, which is why a great deal of content is already out there. We recommend that you harness this by establishing an Instagram presence and populating the platform with #ThinkVermont content.
Here are our recommendations for rolling out the ThinkVermont Instagram:

• Crowdsourced Content: Populating your profile with crowdsourced photos is a great way to diversify your content, engage with your following and tap into the great material that already exists. Encourage followers and event attendees to post using #ThinkVermont for a chance to have their photo featured on your page.

New York Economic Development Corporation (NYCEDC) asked locals to imagine the #FutureNYC during events to spark digital dialogue and grow engagement.

The Greater Des Moines Partnership boosts their talent attraction initiative, CarpeDM Seize Des Moines, with community engagement, regularly posting photos taken by followers who use #SeizeDesMoines.
• Host Instagram Takeovers: Leverage influential Vermont entrepreneurs, young professionals and businesses with significant followings by asking them to take over your account for a week. It’s a great, no-cost way to showcase a “day in the life” of a Vermonter on the ThinkVermont platform and to engage with the state’s business community.

![Instagram Takeover Image]

As part of the “Calgary. Be Part of The Energy” campaign, Calgary Economic Development regularly turns over the reins to the city’s up-and-comers to show why they love being “part of the energy.”

Facebook

Facebook has proven to be an effective marketing tool, particularly when funds are used to increase the reach of targeted content. Allocating a budget to posts allows you to extend their reach and target them to specific Facebook audiences, based on age, interests, location and other factors. This is a great way to make sure that your content gets seen by the right people—particularly as organic reach continues to suffer.

Doing this consistently, however, is an easy way to eat up your funds—which is why we recommend focusing your paid efforts behind large pieces of content or campaigns that you want to reach in- and out-of-state professionals within a specific timeframe. We recommend allocating $500 each to two campaigns during the first year of the program. You might consider timing these following the launch of the new website and the creation of new success story videos.

We also recommend focusing on uploading native content—particularly success story videos—when appropriate. The Facebook algorithm has proven to be very friendly in highlighting native videos in users’ newsfeeds, resulting in significantly higher reach than simply posting a link to content from YouTube or Vimeo.
E-Newsletters

A New ThinkVermont E-Newsletter
DED’s current newsletter is a great resource for in-state business and those interested to learn about the “nitty-gritty” of economic development programs in the state—but it doesn’t cater to key out-of-state audiences (such as the 11% of young adult survey respondents who said they would be interested to learn more about Vermont).

That’s why we recommend you create a separate quarterly newsletter, consistent in design with ThinkVermont.com, to push out your best success stories and news to an audience of prospects.

As proposed, portions of this newsletter can be repurposed for VDTM and Vermont Life e-newsletters lists to give visitors and subscribers who already know and love Vermont for its tourism assets a taste of what it’s like to live and work in the state.

We also recommend sending the newsletter to in-state companies and influencers as a means of educating them about good news happening in the state, instilling pride and inspiring them to share their own success stories with ACCD.

Example: Invest in Holland (right), the monthly e-newsletter from the Netherlands Foreign Investment Agency, has a long-scrolling, mobile-optimized format, short and sweet content with high-quality images and geo-targeted contact information—many of the qualities of a “best practice” economic development newsletter.

Leveraging Existing Vermont E-Newsletters
Leverage existing e-newsletters—like those maintained by VDTM, Vermont Life, Vermont Captive and the state’s colleges and universities—by providing them with content and calls-to-action to include in their mailings. This content can range from company and young professional success stories that could be included as sidebars to a simple icon or line of copy urging readers to learn more about living, working and doing business in Vermont.

We also recommend that you ask VDTM to include an item in their newsletter about subscribing to the ThinkVermont newsletter or sponsor a giveaway to boost list development. Cross pollination is key.
ACCD has already begun to build a library of success stories to showcase Vermont’s unique assets as a place to work, live and do business. As you say, “successful Vermonters are the best advocates for Vermont”—and we agree. We recommend that you continue to build out this library, both by creating new, streamlined content of your own and by tapping into the video resources already available in the state.

Showcase CEO and Young Professional Success Stories

With four videos already completed, ACCD is well on its way to developing a robust library of success stories. We recommend that you continue to create video content to showcase on ThinkVermont.com and push out through social-digital efforts. Ideally, you’ll develop a healthy mix of testimonials from major companies, small businesses, entrepreneurs and young professionals in a range of industries. Here are a few concepts to consider:

- “Why Vermont” – Featuring short testimonials from everyone from CEOs to a young worker who found a good manufacturing job and now has benefits and a 401K.
- Day in the Life – Featuring a telecommuter, young professional or people who recently moved to Vermont for a job.
- Boomerangs – Featuring Vermonters who have returned “home” and are doing well and doing “good.”
- Old Meets New – Featuring a value-added agriculture business that employs engineers and IT professionals to show the diversity of “tech” jobs and the sophistication of Vermont’s food producers.

In addition to showcasing these videos and “snippets” of these videos prominently on your website, you can extend their reach and relevancy by repurposing interesting quotes, facts and images for evergreen social-digital content. Keep some ready-made posts on file to help populate your social feed on days where news coverage is slow.
ThinkVermont Campaign Introduction Video
Produce a short video to announce the launch of the new website and the ThinkVermont campaign as a whole. This can be used at a press or launch event, pushed out on social media and repurposed for use in paid ads on streaming services to piggyback on VDTM ad buys on Hulu, YouTube, etc.

Create “Infographic” Videos
Produce short, compelling videos highlighting Vermont’s strengths as a place to work, live and do business in infographics. This fact-driven approach to communicating Vermont’s assets would serve as nice contrast to the pathos of storytelling videos. Plus, they would likely be clean and more cost-effective to create. See Appendix E for tips and best practices for creating infographic videos.

![Infographic Image]

Repurpose Existing Video Content
There’s plenty of great video content that already exists in Vermont that ACCD would be smart to leverage. We recommend the following tactics to take advantage of these existing assets:
• Explore an in-kind partnership with Vermont PBS for Season 2 of InnoVaTe
• Connect with Coldwell Banker, the Town of Bennington (VermontBeginsHere.com) and other entities producing Vermont stories to explore opportunities to repurpose their content to house on ThinkVermont.com

Capture Video Vignettes at Events
Capturing videos during events is another cost- and time-efficient way to build your video library. The Chamber of Commerce Business & Industry EXPO, Tech Jam and Vermont Young Professionals events, among others, present great opportunities to crowdsource “Why
Vermont” content for your website and social-digital channels.
Although the production values of the videos you’ve already shot is very high, these new videos could easily be shot with an iPad or iPhone, which may then seem even more “authentic.” Encourage those featured to share the videos on their social networks using the hashtag
#ThinkVermont to help extend the reach.
Paid Media - Advertising

Strategic paid media can be a valuable aspect of an economic development marketing program—the key word is strategic. While your mind might immediately jump to a spread in a top-tier business publication when you think of paid media, the reality is that print advertising is extremely expensive and often not worth the cost. A single full-page, black-and-white ad in the Wall Street Journal, for example, is upwards of $300,000.

Given your budget and today’s increasingly digital climate, we recommend focusing your energy on digital efforts as well as co-op and in-kind opportunities.

Digital Advertising

Leverage VDTM’s Ad Buy: Digital advertising is where you’ll get the biggest “bang for your buck” in the paid media arena. This is particularly true, given that VDTM already makes significant digital buys. If just some of those ads contained business and talent attraction-focused messaging, ACCD could see real results—especially because the Vermont visitor target demographic overlaps well with your target audience. Here are just three ways to partner with VDTM in this effort that combines tourism and economic development messaging:

- Showcase companies whose founders or top executives came to Vermont to ski, fell in love with the state and built businesses here, with messaging along the lines of “Came to Ski. Stayed to Build a Business.”
- Show tech workers biking to work with messaging along the lines of “Vermonters don’t have to go on vacation to take a bike ride. They can ride to work.”
- Couple a beautiful photo of a microbrew and plate of Vermont cheeses with a headline like. “Great beer and cheese aren’t the only things Vermont makes, but photos of microchips and IT gizmos just aren’t as pretty.”

TARGET AUDIENCES

- Young Professionals
- Business Owners: In and Out of State
- Influencers

METRICS

- Impressions
- Click-Through Rate (Aim for about 0.5-2.0 % for search ads and 0.5-1.0% for display ads)
- Conversions
Test Google AdWords Pay-Per-Click Campaign: Following the launch of ThinkVermont.com, we recommend launching a Google AdWords pay-per-click (PPC) campaign to extend the reach of your messaging and drive traffic to the new website. The ads should incorporate your key messages targeting young professionals, entrepreneurs and businesses and include calls to action to visit ThinkVermont.com for more information. The beauty of Pay Per Click campaigns is that you can continually monitor and tweak the ads to optimize their effectiveness.

Here are a few examples of PPC ads – both text-only and display

Tech Jobs in Vermont - ThinkVermont.com

Forward Thinking - Beautiful & Bold - Entrepreneurial Spirit

- News & Events
- Success Stories
- Outdoor Recreation
- Arts & Culture

Work in Vermont - ThinkVermont.com

Make A Life, A Living, A Profit... A Difference in Vermont Forward Thinking - Extraordinary Quality - Entrepreneurial Spirit

- Careers
- Success Stories
- Outdoor Recreation
- Arts & Culture

Cooperative Print Advertising

Explore “pay-to-play” cooperative advertorial opportunities similar to those negotiated by VDTM with the Boston Herald, with a focus on attracting young professionals from the Greater New England market. To help underwrite the cost and expand your supporter network, invite in-state companies to partner in a “Vermont is Hiring” feature, with various sponsorship levels – and corresponding levels of exposure – to encourage both small and large companies to participate.
Regional Public Radio Test Run
Connect with in-state business owners, influencers, entrepreneurs and young professionals by underwriting Vermont Public Radio – on air and online (VPR.net). VPR covers the entire state and surrounding regions, including part of New Hampshire, New York, Massachusetts and Quebec – reaching more than 170,000 listeners each week. VPR has also indicated they may be receptive to a “trade” deal in lieu of cash. Ideally, the sponsorship would run during peak tourism seasons to capture those listeners—some of which likely overlap our target audiences.

Depending upon how the VPR test goes and if budget allows in future years, ACCD may also consider a test on Boston’s WBUR with a strong call to action about “What a difference a state makes.” We spoke with Matt Peters, National Sales Manager for WBUR, and he said that they’re open to doing all sorts of deals to fit in with budgets/target programs and audiences, but they like to sign underwriters on for at least 10-13 weeks (quarterly), with at least 5 spots per week. On the low end, that’s likely around $20,000. Average buys are between $30,000 and $50,000, so you see how that can gobble up your budget quickly.

Non-Traditional Print Advertising
Create quirky, classified ads in Seven Days-like newspapers in New England and the Northeast, personifying Vermont as the “seeking” / “offering” party in the following sections: Personals/Dating, Employment, Housing, Home Improvement, Lost & Found, etc.

These curious, intelligently funny ads have the potential to catch the eye of target audiences and even generate earned media. Because this is an unusual tactic, it is wise to run a test in Boston or another target market, like New York or Philadelphia, to test its effectiveness. Focus on quirkier, independent newspapers like DigBoston, Philly Weekly and Rochester’s City Newspaper, whose readers are more likely to be responsive to this kind of creative ad than those of a more conservative publication. Here’s a sample personals/dating ad:

Up for something different? Open-minded, natural beauty seeks multiple partners to live a different lifestyle. I’m small in stature and big on creating opportunities. You’re a forward thinker and love the outdoors. Together, we bring out the best in each other. If you’re ready to live and work differently, we need to connect and explore the possibilities. I am the state of Vermont, and I mean business.

www.thinkvermont.gov/different
Explore Limited Buy In-Kind Partnerships with Local News Media
Given the need for buy-in from in-state influencers, we recommend looking into partnerships with local news media to push out your content to a regional audience at a limited cost. Reach out to WCAX (CBS Burlington), WPTZ (NBC Plattsburgh) and other target regional broadcast media to explore limited buy advertising and partnership opportunities to stretch resources. For example, would they be willing to run abbreviated versions of your videos – almost as PSAs to promote that they are good jobs in Vermont for young residents? If they aren’t interested in partnering, go the earned media route because straight paid advertising would be too expensive and not targeted enough.

Collateral
While print collateral seems to be going the way of the horse and buggy, it is necessary to have some material on hand for use at meetings, trade shows and for targeted mailings. We recommend creating digital-first collateral that can be easily updated and printed on demand according to need.

Create Fresh Collateral
Create fresh “Why Vermont” collateral materials consistent in design and messaging with ThinkVermont.com. These materials can be housed as downloads on your website and printed on demand in small batches for use in meetings, events, trade shows and direct mail marketing. Here are core collateral pieces we recommend as first priorities:

- General Vermont Business Brochure: This should be Vermont’s business story “at a glance” with content on strategic advantages, area companies, success stories, incentives and other items that can be repurposed from your website.
- Vermont Programs and Incentives: This would detail VEGI and other programs, services and incentives available to businesses.
- What A Difference a State Makes: Aimed at young professionals, this general brochure would promote the benefits of living, working and growing a business in Vermont and communicates that there are good jobs to be had at interesting companies.
- Vermont is Hiring: Aimed at Vermont college students, this fun, edgy brochure would plant seeds early that Vermont offers job and career opportunities, as well as fertile ground for entrepreneurs to start a business.

Use Existing Partnerships & Events to Distribute
We recommend distributing relevant collateral pieces using existing partnerships—akin to the joint mailing to incoming Vermont students sponsored by the Vermont Student Assistance Corporation and VDTM each summer—to spread your key messages among current students and tourists and drive traffic to your website. Another low cost way to distribute these materials is to offer them at the Harlow’s Vermont Farmstand at the Boston Public Market and at relevant trade shows that VDTM and other state agencies plan to attend.
Trade Shows and Special Events

A good starting place for maximizing trade shows and special events would be to post relevant events, including Tech Jam, Vermont Young Professionals networking events and trade shows DED plans to attend, on ThinkVermont.com to serve as a resource for the in-state audience and to showcase all that’s going on to an out-of-state audience. Here are a few additional recommendations to reach influential audiences.

Updated Pop-Up/Display for Trade Shows
Create a new ThinkVermont-branded pop-up and/or display for use at trade shows and in-state events where DED or VDTM has an established presence.

Young Professional Networking Events
Vermont is home to a strong and growing young professional network that can serve as an asset in Vermont’s economic development marketing efforts. These young professionals serve both as success stories and as advocates for Vermont among other young professionals living and working out of state. Any presence that ACCD can have at young professional networking events would be a great way to generate social-digital and video content, grow the Vermont Digital Ambassadors program and generally establish ties within this influential community.

Tech Jam, Manufacturing Jam, etc.
Vermont’s Tech Jam has become an important resource and networking event for the state’s tech community. Aligning with this event and its influential attendees is a smart strategy to engage both in- and out-of-state audiences. As with the young professional networking events, we recommend exploring partnership opportunities to establish a meaningful presence at the event, where ACCD can crowdsource video and social media content and encourage buy-in from this audience.

Given the great success of this event, it’s worth exploring the possibility of extending the format beyond tech to other industries. Creating or playing a role in establishing “Manufacturing Jam,” for example, would give ACCD a presence among another influential industry group in the state. This might also be an opportunity to extend the program to other parts of the state beyond Chittenden County.
Maximizing In-State Events
With thousands slated to visit the state for the 2016 Women’s World Cup Ski Events at Killington and other crowd-drawing events like the Spartan Race, Wanderlust Stratton, Burlington Discover Jazz Festival and the Vermont City Marathon, ACCD has an opportunity to access a key out-of-state audience. We recommend maximizing these opportunities by:
• Creating relevant Twitter calendars using the event hashtags to access the social-digital conversation surrounding the events
• Showcasing collateral and/or branding materials at the event, if possible
• Partnering with local companies/organizations to sponsor a food/beverage booth with #ThinkVermont materials

Higher Education Outreach & Vermont Alumni Marketing
In a private meeting with the University of Vermont and again at a roundtable with 10 member universities and colleges from the Association of Vermont Independent Colleges, it became abundantly clear that universities crave a better connection with local businesses as a means of offering apprenticeships and internships to their students. Some are further along on initiatives and programs than others, but there is clearly a need to strengthen the connective tissue to align higher education and economic development. In terms of the marketing plan, Vermont’s strong higher educational opportunities are clearly part of the story.

In addition to the VSAC mailing and sharing content for alumni magazines recommended previously in this document, here are three additional marketing ideas to consider:

• Showcase University Apprenticeship Programs: Vermont can showcase colleges that have successful apprentice programs with local businesses in its newsletters, on its website and in other marketing materials.

• Shine a Spotlight on University Success Stories: Likewise, the state can illuminate products, research and companies spinning out of its colleges and universities in your marketing efforts. Perfect examples are Seedsheet and Iris Virtual Reality, which were among the Middlebury College companies showcased in a recent PBS NewsHour show entitled “Move over Silicon Valley: The next startup nexus is...northern Vermont?”
• Piggy Back on University Alumni Events in Key Markets: One tactic that some few other states employ with great success is to have the Governor speak at alumni events in key markets that are prime hunting ground for talent and companies. It then becomes a “win-win” for the institution and the state. Key events in the coming year where we would recommend this tactic (at similar events in 2017), are:
  - UVM Spring Social at Penn Club, New York City, May 24, 2016
  - UVM – Vermonter Day at Fenway Park, Boston, July 2, 2016

  Middlebury College has chapters in Boston, New York City, Philadelphia and Washington DC (among others) and has ongoing “Mini-Reunions” of young professionals hosted by alumni. ACCD should reach out to other Vermont colleges and universities as well to investigate the best out-of-state alumni events to attend.

Direct Outreach for Business Retention and Expansion

Although direct outreach to Vermont’s existing businesses falls last on this long list of tactics, it is far from least. ACCD is acutely aware that “hugging and holding” existing businesses is a high priority and part of their everyday jobs. To augment those ongoing efforts and give them additional exposure, we recommend two additional tactics:

Handwritten Letter by the Governor to Businesses

We recommend working with the office of the Governor to develop handwritten letters from the Governor to send to businesses thanking them for investing in Vermont. If appropriate, these can be sent along with the new collateral pieces you create. This personal touch will go a long way toward communicating to in-state businesses that they are valued and appreciated.

“Thank You for Investing” Roundtables

ACCD should also work to organize small “Thank You for Investing” roundtables with the Governor and area businesses to demonstrate that the Governor is committed to helping existing businesses to thrive and expand in the state. A smart strategy would be to organize these on a regional level, partnering with regional economic development organizations to host the region’s biggest employers for luncheons or roundtable discussions. Local media should be invited to attend and report on the events.
A Few Big Ideas

Here are a few “big ideas” to consider once you’ve built the foundation of your program.

Explore Brand Partnerships
With VDTM’s history of successful marketing partnerships with Cabot Creamery and the Vermont Ski Areas Association, it’s a smart strategy to explore how ACCD can participate in or leverage these kinds of partnerships. Explore partnership opportunities with Long Trail Brewing Co., Ben & Jerry’s and other Vermont brands that may be interested in helping to attract young professionals to the state. While these may be “reach” partnerships, they are certainly worth exploring, given the companies’ alignment with the Vermont brand and large consumer base.

Think Vermont Events & Displays at Vermont Welcome Centers
Organize events and/or displays at Vermont Welcome Centers on high-traffic weekends—like those surrounding freshmen orientation or major ski events—to disseminate your messaging among visitors, students and other key audiences. You might consider partnering with Vermont Young Professionals to get some young techies and other professionals to “work” the event—handing out flyers and engaging passersby to talk about what it’s like to live and work in Vermont.

This kind of event would be excellent fodder for social media content as well as a great opportunity for a campaign. Set up a ThinkVermont branded photo booth or green screen with fun props to encourage visitors to take pictures with their friends in front of Vermont backdrops (not just scenic landscapes—cool work spaces, microbreweries, downtowns and other landmarks, too) and post to Instagram and Twitter using #ThinkVermont for a chance to win a ski weekend or dinner at a local restaurant.

Longer term, Vermont should work to tell its business story better in Vermont Welcome Centers through permanent or revolving displays. This might be explored as a co-op opportunity with some of the state’s top employers.
Resort Take Overs

Given the overlapping target audiences frequenting Vermont resorts, we see huge potential in working with the properties to “take over” one or more major resorts for 1-2 weeks. Ideas for promoting Vermont for business include:

- Chairlift/tower advertising
- Calling cards/collateral for hotel rooms
- Special events in the lodges/pubs
- Social media contests

VT Bus: Take Your Story on the Road

Customize and visually brand a small bus, van, or car and trailer to serve as a mobile economic development office. The van can tour in and out-of-state delivering messages on job and investment opportunities and related incentives and programs, as well as tourism. The effort presents a natural opportunity for public and private entities to partner to spread positive messaging and feature products. The bus would serve as a mobile billboard to station at high traffic locations along the highway as well as at farmers markets, street fairs, concerts, sports events, college campuses, etc. This initiative also has the potential to generate a great deal of social media content as well as earned media opportunities.
The following details a month-by-month plan for executing the priority marketing tactics recommended for the 14 months from May 1, 2016 through the end of the state’s fiscal year on June 30, 2017, when we believe the current budget allocation will be depleted. Although we’d love to see the entire program be front-loaded with all the assets and marketing tactics launched in the first quarter, we tried to be realistic about staffing bandwidth, so we’ve spread out initiatives throughout the year. Timing may change, depending upon the need for RFPs and other issues.

MAY 2016

- Begin strategy and plan for developing new website, including:
  - Define requirements
  - Site map and wire frames
  - Content plan, including 5 success stories to be researched and written by Vermont Life staff
  - 4-month project schedule/assignments
- Take stock of business-oriented photography; solicit photos from RDCs/universities, etc.; develop plan for filling in holes
- Develop target media lists with contact details for targeted reporters for top ten media outlets; disseminate good news throughout the year
- Attend Chamber of Commerce Business & Industry EXPO on May 26 to start capturing video vignettes of Vermont companies
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>JUNE 2016</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Design website</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Write all content and success stories</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Work with Vermont Life to launch “Could You Live/Work Here?” series</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Work with Killington to get business content in 2016-2017 resort magazine to capitalize on the Women’s World Cup Ski Events at Killington on November 26-27, 2016</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Finish gathering all visual assets for website</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Edit 4 existing videos to 30- and 60-seconds</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Scout Burlington Discover Jazz Festival (June 3-12) and Wanderlust Stratton (June 16-19) if schedules allow to determine best ways to capitalize on these events in 2017</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>JULY 2016</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Develop/program website</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Design new template for ThinkVermont e-newsletter</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Begin rest of collateral based on content/visual assets from website</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Work with VDTM to integrate ThinkVermont messaging into existing ad buys for fall and winter season</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Work out sponsorship for Tech Jam in October</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>AUGUST 2016</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Finish website; optimize content based on keyword research; develop title tags, meta tags, alt tags; do beta testing/quality control</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Develop content for first ThinkVermont e-newsletter; augment distribution list</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Finish and print new collateral</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Develop Student Brochure for inclusion in September VSAC mailing</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
SEPTEMBER 2016

- Develop 15-30 second campaign introduction video; Develop social/digital calendar for website launch; draft press release
- Launch website with aggressive media and social/digital push
- Ramp up #ThinkVermont, posting on a daily basis
- Launch new ThinkVermont e-newsletter, which drives traffic to the new website
- Design and produce pop-up banner for trade shows, using same branding as the website
- Develop pay-per-click text and display ads
- Launch Google AdWords campaign to drive traffic to new site

OCTOBER 2016

- Ramp up Facebook account; launch first paid campaign
- Explore sponsorship of Young Professional events
- Attend Tech Jam (traditionally held about October 23-24) with new pop-up banner and collateral; take additional video vignettes

NOVEMBER 2016

- Launch Instagram account
- Explore “trade” deal with VPR; write copy and prepare to launch in early 2017
- Bring pop-up banner and new collateral to distribute at Killington for Women’s World Cup Ski Events

DECEMBER 2016

- Start developing Digital Ambassador program, including:
  - Identifying and recruiting ambassadors
  - Naming program and designing template
- Start work on infographic video
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>JANUARY 2017</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Launch VPR sponsorship</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Launch Digital Ambassador program</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Complete infographic video</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>FEBRUARY 2017</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Develop copy for non-traditional print advertising; launch small test in Boston</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Begin planning for production of five new videos; make plans for shoots in the spring</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MARCH 2017</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Work with Governor’s office and UVM to arrange for Governor to speak at Spring Social in New York City and Vermonter Day at Fenway Park to deliver ThinkVermont for business and careers messaging</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Draft Governor’s letter and distribute to in-state businesses</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Host first Instagram takeover</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>APRIL 2017</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sponsor and attend Vermonters Ball, which is sponsored by Vermont Young Professionals in early April at Hotel Vermont</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Plan for first “Thank You for Investing” Roundtable; find RDC to co-sponsor; get on the Governor’s calendar</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MAY 2017</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-----------------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Work on and attend UVM Spring Social at Penn Club, New York City</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shoot three Vermont Success Story videos; edit and post; publicize through media/newsletters/social</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>JUNE 2017</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Launch first “Thank you for Investing” luncheon</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shoot two Vermont Success Story videos; edit and post; publicize through media/newsletters/social</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Plan for Governor event at UVM’s Vermonter Day at Fenway Park, Boston in early July</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Start planning for Tech &amp; Taps press trip for Fall 2017</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Plan for 2017-2018 marketing program, including possible WBUR sponsorship to coincide with influx of Boston college students and their parents in August/September</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Although many of those interviewed want the marketing plan to solve everything short of world peace and suggested metrics like “growth in GDP,” we need to be crystal clear about what metrics can – and cannot – be used to measure the effectiveness of the marketing plan.

The Vermont Chamber Foundation has created a Vermont Economic Dashboard, which tracks Vermont’s economic performance on six key indicators – economic activity, innovation & entrepreneurs, workforce & talent, Vermont demographics, quality of place and infrastructure & investment. Because this dashboard is already in place and it will take time to move the needles, ACCD should reinforce rather than replicate these metrics.

For the shorter term of this three-year marketing plan, we strongly recommend that ACCD create a dashboard to established baselines and measure the following on a quarterly basis:

Business Development Metrics
- Leads and inquiries received by ACCD
- Conversion of leads to projects
- Jobs created or retained
- Capital investment through business retention, expansion or attraction
Marketing the state as an attractive place for companies and people to be in business can help generate leads, which can create jobs and employment, which produce income tax revenue, which ultimately supports the state’s general fund.

> JOBS/EMPLOYMENT = > INCOME TAX REVENUE SUPPORTS STATE’ S GENERAL FUND

Marketing Metrics

- Website traffic, including increase in UMVs (unique monthly visitors), sources of traffic, etc.
- Media coverage in terms of impressions, advertising equivalency, editorial impact, key messages
- Social and digital media engagement, including shares/likes/retweets; increase in followers
- Number and percentage increase in Digital Ambassadors
- Video views
- Perception shifts, as measured in three years by comparing the baseline perception surveys to new survey results

Detailed metrics associated with each marketing tactic are included as sidebars in that section of the plan.
Vermont is highly unusual in not previously dedicating any financial or human resources to economic development marketing on an ongoing basis.

To give you a snapshot of what’s happening around the country, DCI had 16 clients in 2015 that spent more than $200,000/year on economic development marketing, including five clients that spent well more than $300,000/year. Most of those programs were for media relations programs only, which were augmented by additional funding for advertising, social/digital work and other marketing handled by other agencies. Those clients range from small cities and counties with populations of less than 150,000 to much bigger states and countries. We are currently working with a rural county in New York’s Hudson Valley that has half the population of Vermont, but has an annual economic development/lead generation marketing budget of $350,000.

Based on the requests for proposals that DCI receives, as well as a recent survey of state economic development organizations, marketing budgets can range from $90,000/year to more than $5 million. For example, DCI recently received a RFP for a $200,000 media relations program from a neighboring New England state that is focused on attracting seven targeted industries.

In addition to funding, nearly all of the economic development organizations we work with have one or more staff members dedicated to marketing – whether a Director of Marketing, VP of Communications or other analogous titles. The fact that the State of Vermont has so few resources devoted to economic development marketing will limit your ability to execute a plan unless staff is reallocated or you outsource some portion of the work to freelancers or PR/advertising/marketing firms.
At a minimum, we would recommend the following to stretch your human resources:

- Explore whether the Director of Communications position under VDTM could execute some of the earned and owned media parts of this plan.
- Tap into the staff of Vermont Life as much as possible for content development for the website, collateral materials and other initiatives.
- Reorganize staff responsibilities, or ideally, create a new position for a dedicated Project Manager within DED to serve as “point person” for implementation of the plan.
- Reallocate some of the Chief Marketing Officer’s duties to allow this position to serve as Contract Manager for any outsourced services on this economic development marketing effort.

In the chart on the following page, we’ve indicated recommended budget allocations for the major marketing tactics.
Vermont 3-Year Marketing Plan Budget

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Tactic</th>
<th>3-Year Budget</th>
<th>% of Budget</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Earned Media – PR</td>
<td>$219,000</td>
<td>29.20%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Proactive Pitching</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Press FAM Tours</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Website</td>
<td>$90,000</td>
<td>12.00%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Design/Development</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Content Development</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Photography</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Owned Media - Digital/Social</td>
<td>$24,000</td>
<td>3.20%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Twitter/Instagram/Facebook</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Digital Ambassadors</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>E-Newsletters</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Videos</td>
<td>$41,000</td>
<td>5.47%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Success Stories</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Infographic Video</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Video Vignettes</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Launch/General Campaign Video</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Paid Media - Advertising</td>
<td>$145,000</td>
<td>19.33%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Digital Advertising/PPC Ads</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Co-op Print Advertising</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VPR-NPR Sponsorships</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Non-Traditional Print</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>In-Kind Partnerships</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Collateral</td>
<td>$43,500</td>
<td>5.80%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Creative Development</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>General Business</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Incentives &amp; Programs</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Potential Residents</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Students</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Additional Outreach and Promotion</td>
<td>$150,000</td>
<td>20.00%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Trade Show Display</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Event Sponsorships</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>University Outreach</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Business Retention Outreach</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Big Promotion Ideas</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Opportunity Contingency (5%)</td>
<td>$37,500</td>
<td>5.00%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>$750,000</td>
<td>100.00%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Disclaimer: Please note these estimates were provided by the consultant team. After a Request for Proposals is issued for various implementation tactics, we will have a more precise budget.
Dear Vermont Economic Development Team,

Development Counsellors International (DCI) and Spike Advertising would like to express our sincere gratitude for the opportunity to prepare this economic development marketing plan on behalf of the State of Vermont—and to acknowledge the insight and support we received from you, your key stakeholders and citizens of the state in developing it.

During the course of our work with the Vermont Agency of Commerce and Community Development, we met with more than 100 individuals who have shaped this plan in a variety of meaningful ways. We appreciate the time that each of them took to share with us their insights.

Very special thanks to Joan Goldstein and Heather Pelham, who provided incredible leadership, guidance and input through the entire process, ensuring that the plan reflects a collaborative process and a clear vision for the future of the state’s economic development marketing program. We would also like to thank Megan Smith, Steven Cook, Mary Hegarty Nowlan and Kirsten Bourgeois for their support and input during the process.

On behalf of our teams at DCI and Spike Advertising, thank you for the incredible opportunity to partner with you. We are truly excited to see what’s in store for the State of Vermont.

Sincerely,

Dariel Y. Curren
Senior Vice President
DCI

Patience Fairbrother
Account Executive
DCI

Ken Millman
Creative Director
Spike Advertising
APPENDIX A:

IMMERSION TOUR PARTICIPANTS AND KEY FINDINGS
VERMONT IMMERSION TOUR

5 DAYS

MEETINGS AND INTERVIEWS WITH 100+ KEY CONTACTS

COMPANIES | INDUSTRY ORGANIZATIONS | UNIVERSITIES | ENTREPRENEURS | AND MORE
Over the course of five full days, Development Counsellors International, Spike Advertising and ACCD conducted a series of roundtables and interviews involving more than 90 individuals from companies, industry organizations, universities, Vermont legislators and other entities. In the following weeks, one-on-one interviews were conducted with more than 20 additional contacts. Following is a list of participants.

Monday, January 11, 2016 - Burlington

9:00am – 10:30am
Lisa Ventriss, Vermont Business Roundtable
Mike Seaver, People’s United Bank
Andrew Martin, Neagley & Chase Construction

11:00am – 12:30pm
Dr. John Evans, Senior Advisor to the President, University of Vermont
Provost David Rosowsky, University of Vermont

2:00pm – 3:30pm
Tom Torti, President, Lake Champlain Regional Chamber of Commerce
Cathy Davis, Lake Champlain Regional Chamber of Commerce
Frank Cioffi, Greater Burlington Industrial Corporation
Curt Carter, Greater Burlington Industrial Corporation
Seth Bowden, Greater Burlington Industrial Corporation
Don Baker, Key Bank
Ethan Bechtel, MBA Health
Walt Blasberg, North Hero House
Ron Boucher, Wells Fargo Advisors
Jesse Bridges, Burlington Parks and Recreation
Sara Byers, Leonardo’s Pizza
Tom Clavelle, Engelberth Construction
Melissa Dever, C2 (Competitive Computing)

3:30pm – 5:00pm
Eric Hanson, Hanson & Doremus Investment Management
Stephanie Mapes, Paul, Frank and Collins
Bill Orleans, PP&D Brochure Distribution
Paul Plunkett, Hickok & Boardman Insurance
Stephanie Taylor, R.E.M. Development Company
Dawn Terrill, JaniTech
Brad Worthen, V/T Commercial Real Estate
David Bradbury, Vermont Center for Emerging Technologies
Michael Schirling, BTV Ignite
Jeff Couture, Vermont Technology Alliance
Susan Dorn, RingMaster Software
Michael Rooney, RingMaster Software
Emily Piper, Agilion
John Burton, NPI Technology Management Services
Tuesday, January 12, 2016 - Montpelier

8:00am – 9:00am
Bob Zider, Vermont Manufacturing Extension Center
Bill Driscoll, Associated Industries of Vermont

11:00am – 12:00pm
Jolinda LeClair, Agency of Agriculture, Food and Markets
Chelsea Lewis, Agency of Agriculture, Food and Markets
Reg Godin, Agency of Agriculture, Food and Markets
Alison Kosakowski, Agency of Agriculture, Food and Markets
Abby Willard, Agency of Agriculture, Food and Markets
Tom Bivins, Vermont Cheese Council
Kathleen Wanner, Vermont Woodlands Association
Rachel Carter, Vermont Sustainable Jobs Fund
Jim Harrison, Vermont Specialty Foods Association
Kirsten Bourgeois, Agency of Commerce and Community Development
Jared Duval, Agency of Commerce and Community Development

2:00pm – 3:00pm
Betsy Bishop, Vermont Chamber of Commerce
Tori Ossola, Vermont Chamber of Commerce

3:30pm – 5:00pm
Matthew Derr, President, Sterling College
Jack Neuhauser, President, St. Michael’s College
Don Laackman, President, Champlain College
Peter Eden, President, Landmark College
Rich Schneider, President, Norwich University
Richard Scaldini, Interim President, New England Culinary Institute (NECI)
Dave Donahue, Special Assistant to the President, Middlebury College
Lisa Rae, Senior Vice President for Legal Affairs and General Counsel, SIT
Bob Hamilton, Associate Dean for Professional Affairs, Albany College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences
Bob Kenny, President, Goddard College
Susan Stitely, President, Association of Vermont Independent Colleges
Kimberly Jessup, Association of Vermont Independent Colleges
Pat Moulton, Secretary, Agency of Commerce and Community Development
Immersion Tour Participants

Wednesday, January 13, 2016 - Montpelier

12:00pm – 1:00pm
Heidi Scheuermann, House Committee on Commerce and Economic Development

3:00pm – 5:00pm
Adam Grinold, Brattleboro Development Credit Corporation
Francis “Dutch” Walsh, Town of Rockingham
Wayne Granquist, Chair, Southern Vermont Economic Development Zone
Dale Williamson, NewsBank
Terry McDonnell, Great Bear Realty Corporation
Bob Flint, Springfield Regional Development Corporation
Luke Stafford, Mondo Mediaworks
Deb Carbin, Great Falls Regional Chamber of Commerce
Michael Knapp, Green River Software

Thursday, February 11, 2016 - Rutland

3:00pm – 5:00pm
Lyle Jepson, Rutland Economic Development Corporation
Chris Louras, Mayor, City of Rutland
Chris Saunders, Staff, Senator Patrick Leahy
Paul Gallo, Rutland Creative Economy
Amanda Richardson, Castleton Polling Institute
Heather Robertson, remote digital strategist for Beutler Ink
Tyler Richardson, Rutland Economic Development Corporation
Rob Mitchell, Rutland Herald
Tom Donahue, Rutland Regional Chamber of Commerce
William Notte, City of Rutland, Board of Alderman
Chris Ettori, City of Rutland, Board of Alderman
Mike Coppinger, Downtown Rutland Partnership
Steve Costello, Green Mountain Power
Mark Foley, Foley Services
Brennan Duffy, Rutland Redevelopment Authority
Sara Gilbert, Rutland Economic Development Corporation
Matt Bloomer, City of Rutland, Board of Alderman

Thursday, February 11, 2016 - Bennington

10:00am – 12:00pm
Bill Colvin, Bennington County Regional Commission
Berta Maginniss, Manchester and the Mountain Chamber of Commerce
Pauline Moore, Town of Manchester
Mike Harrington, Town of Bennington
Matt Harrington, Bennington Area Chamber of Commerce

Friday, February 12, Montpelier

10:00am – 12:00pm
Joint Hearing, Senate Committee on Economic Development, Housing and General Affairs with House Committee on Commerce and Economic Development
Brandcensus Interviews

Business Owners/High-Ranking Executives
Richard G. “Dixie” Zens, Jr., Abacus Automation and Bennington County Industrial Development Corporation
Mark Curran, Black River Produce
Ric Cabot, Darn Tough Vermont
Joe Fusco, Casella Resource Systems

Influencers
David Snedeker, Northern Vermont Development Association
Tim Smith, Franklin County Industrial Development Corporation
Kira Bacon, Vermont Arts Council
Robin Scheu, Addison County Economic Development Corporation
Bill Colvin, Bennington County Regional Commission

Entrepreneurs
Andy Rosmeissl, Faraday
Jeremy Elliott, Smugglers’ Notch Distillery
Sas Stewart, Stonecutter Spirits

Visitors (Second Home Owners)
Laurie Williams
Terri Tibbatts
Mark Garber

Students
Shawn Childs
Lyle Nichols
Maggie Nowlan

ACCD Stakeholders
Pat Moulton
Brett Long
Fred Kenney

Young Professionals
Ben Cadwallader
Isobel Gabel Nimtz
Seth Nichols
KEY FINDINGS: IMMERSION TOUR
Growth must be Vermont’s number one priority.

Although “growth” is clearly a dirty word to some Vermonters, it must be the state’s top priority. We need to: address population growth (Vermont’s aging population and shrinking workforce); support the growth of start-ups and entrepreneurial businesses; and (down the road) grow the number of out-of-state-businesses that relocate and start-up here. Many believe Vermont should focus on attracting people not businesses, but DCI believes that the latter should not be ignored.
Company success stories abound, but few in-state celebrate Vermont’s biggest business successes.

From high-tech companies to artisanal producers of cheese, spirits and other ag-related products, Vermont is home to many thriving companies that can serve as success stories in our marketing efforts. Dealer.com, Logic Supply, BioTek Instruments, GW Plastics, Chroma Technology, Mylan Technologies, MyWebGrocer, Vermont Precision Tools, Black River Produce, Against the Grain Gourmet, Pete’s Greens and Mack Molding were among those mentioned most frequently.

Unless prompted, very few people mentioned Vermont’s biggest or most iconic companies – Keurig Green Mountain, Ben & Jerry’s, Simon Pearce, Vermont Teddy Bear, Burton, Cabot, Darn Tough, National Life and IBM. Heaven forbid that a company is successful and is acquired or expands outside the state; it almost becomes a pariah. Vermont needs to take more credit for and celebrate the companies that were born, took root and grew in Vermont as a way of inspiring other entrepreneurs. Their founders – and their stories – also need to be harnessed.
Universities thirst for better connections with companies.

In a private meeting with the University of Vermont and then during a roundtable with 10 member universities and colleges of the Association of Vermont Independent Colleges, it became abundantly clear that universities crave a better connection with local businesses as a means of offering apprenticeships and internships to their students. Some are further along on initiatives and programs than others, but it seems like an area where ACCD can help serve as the connective tissue to align higher education and economic development. In terms of the marketing plan, Vermont’s strong higher educational opportunities are clearly part of the story.
Vermont has plenty of jobs to fill, but little public awareness of those jobs.

In the course of our meetings, we encountered a disconnect between the perceived lack of jobs in the state and the reality that a surprising number of businesses are desperately looking to hire. In certain circles, it’s well known that hundreds of jobs are going unfilled—in the tech sector, in particular—while others seem completely unaware of current job opportunities in the state. Local residents don’t know about these jobs—let alone out-of-state talent. Closing this gap will be important to the success of Vermont’s talent attraction and in-state marketing efforts.
Vermonters place a high priority on authenticity.

In 30-plus pages of single-spaced typed notes from the immersion tour, “authentic” was the single word most often repeated across all groups. People are passionate about portraying the real Vermont, not an idealized view of the state. Many also cautioned us not to “over sell” the state.
Vermont is “different” and residents pride themselves on being able to make a difference in the world.

In keeping with the Vermont brand (way of doing and thinking), our economic development marketing plan can feature an innovative tactic or two—something different, something unique, something that embraces a “the medium is the message” approach to marketing the state of Vermont as a special place to live and work.
Infrastructure problems and policy changes are lightning-rod issues, but shouldn’t hamstring marketing efforts.

Although interviewees were quick to point to lack of affordable housing, public transportation, healthcare access, high taxes and a host of other problems as barriers to growth, these issues shouldn’t be the focus of the marketing plan. We can’t wait for everything to get fixed. We must market what is “right” about Vermont now and not get bogged down in what is “wrong” – leaving those issues for the state to tackle over the longer term.
“Two Vermonsts” may exist, but the first challenge is to get people to “Think Vermont.”

Perhaps the biggest “surprise” to DCI was the oft-repeated notion that there are two Vermonsts – the thriving Chittenden County and everywhere else. Although it makes sense that the Northeast Kingdom and other rural areas of Vermont would not have the economic activity/potential of some of the state’s population centers, it was news to us – and somewhat counter-intuitive – that southern Vermont is struggling to rebound from manufacturing and other losses.

Our surveys may shed some light on this issue, but we suspect that people and companies outside the state don’t view Vermont in the same bifurcated way as in-state residents. We believe that our primary challenge will be to get people to “Think Vermont” and that they will then do their own due diligence about where the opportunities are and where they want to live. Having said that, marketing messages/initiatives can certainly consider a nuanced approach to regional differences and should shine the light on lesser known bright spots in the state.
Vermont’s “sweet spot” for attracting workers is when they have an affinity for Vermont and are ready to settle down.

Most interviewees concurred that Vermont’s best chances of success in attracting new workers is if they have a “Drop of Vermont” in them: they grew up in Vermont and left; they went to school or camp in Vermont; or they vacationed or had a second home in Vermont. Many agreed that trying to convince the 40,000 college students to stay in Vermont immediately post-graduation may be an uphill battle unless there is better alignment between higher education and economic development. Rather, the ideal time to target young adults is in that 28-40 year-old age span when they may have some big-market experience under their belt, they may be ready to leave the “rat race” and they are thinking about settling down and starting a family.
We need buy-in from in-state influencers.

Our marketing plan needs to better educate them about the competitive landscape and best practices in talent attraction. We need their help with telling our stories. This requires more of an informational and sharing style of communications—i.e., here’s our plan, here’s how you can help, and here’s how we’re helping you help us.

In addition, part of our informational communications to legislators should point out what our plan will accomplish, and what it can’t. We need to remind legislators that there is a spectrum of policy matters outside our control that impact economic development, and cannot be addressed (fixed) via marketing.
Scarc resources exist to implement an effective long-term economic development marketing plan.

We knew going into this that the budget is very low to implement a three-year marketing plan. It’s also now clear to us that ACCD’s marketing staff is spread very thin. Even with strategic reallocation of people and resources, we will need to be very smart in our plan about how to leverage work created by others – including Vermont PBS, Vermont Public Radio, Vermont Life and other entities telling Vermont’s stories such as Merchants Bank, Coldwell Banker and the Town of Bennington. In addition, Vermont residents are clearly passionate about their state and can become an army of “digital ambassadors” that can spread key messages far and wide at low cost with third-party credibility. It may also prove prudent to outsource some of the marketing tactics to make sure they get executed in a timely and efficient manner.
Metrics are murky.

Although many of those interviewed want the marketing plan to solve everything short of world peace and suggested metrics like “growth in GDP,” we need to be crystal clear about what metrics can – and cannot – be used to measure the effectiveness of the marketing plan. It will take time to move the needles on the Vermont Futures Project dashboard. In the interim, ACCD should create its own dashboard to established baselines and measure the following:

- Leads and inquiries received by ACCD
- Website traffic, including increase in UMVs, sources of traffic, etc.
- Media coverage in terms of impressions, advertising equivalency, editorial impact, key messages
- Social and digital media engagement, including shares/likes/retweets; increase in followers; increase in number of Digital Ambassadors (if we go this route), etc.
- Perception shifts, as measured in three years by comparing the baseline perception surveys to new survey results
APPENDIX B:
SURVEY FINDINGS
PERCEPTION SURVEYS

1. In-State Businesses (343 respondents accessed the survey)
   - 86% of respondents have resided in the state for at least six years, so strong history and knowledge of the state.

2. Out-of-State Young Adults (217 responses)
   - Well-informed with 68% of respondents “somewhat” or “very familiar” with the state.

3. Corporate Executives – Northeast Region (41 responses)
   - Approximately 97% of respondents have been to the state of Vermont but primarily for vacation/leisure purposes.
KEY FINDINGS:
In-State Businesses
ACCD distributed an online survey link to an internal database of businesses located throughout the state. A total of 343 respondents accessed the survey and provided in-depth and thoughtful input on the strengths, as well as the challenges, facing the state.

In-state respondents are engaged, knowledgeable and have an extensive history in the state.

- 86% of respondents have resided in the state for at least six years.
- More than 80% of respondents are over the age of 45 years.
- 38% of respondents have always lived in Vermont or grew up in the state, moved away for a period of time, and returned.

In addition to providing high ratings on Vermont as a place to raise a family (8.3 on a scale of one -poor to 10 - excellent) and a place to visit (9.2), 46% of respondents would volunteer as a “state ambassador” should a program of this type be developed. However, this audience is also very pragmatic and honest about the shortcomings of the state from a business perspective.

A key theme that emerged from the findings of this survey, as well as the surveys of external audiences, was that Vermont is perceived highly from a lifestyle perspective. Most respondents report the quality and pace of life in Vermont is a key strength, but that Vermont is not a “top of mind” location for advancing your career or growing a business. In fact, the SWOT analysis revealed the majority of identified strengths and opportunities are directly tied to Vermont’s lifestyle appeal, while the primary weaknesses and threats related to the state’s business climate.

The top weaknesses identified among in-state businesses include:

- Tax climate/overall cost of doing business
- Excessive/ cumbersome government business regulations
- General anti-business sentiment
- High cost of living relative to wages /salaries

Despite the challenges faced, Vermonters understand that they have a very strong lifestyle brand upon which they can build future marketing efforts. This group believes the greatest opportunity lies with educating businesses (both in- and out-of-state) as well as current residents on the advantages of growing your business or career in Vermont. By correcting any misperceptions and further educating these audiences on the importance of economic growth in Vermont, they believe that Vermont can achieve success not only as a tourism destination, but also as a location for other industry sectors. While this audience views regions across the country as their competitors, it is more likely that Vermont is competing for business and talent against other northeastern U.S. locations.
More than 80% of respondents are 45+ years of age.

Approximately 70% are male.

More than 86% have lived in the state for more than six years.

According to the pie chart:
- Moved to Vermont from elsewhere in the Northeast, 43%
- Moved to Vermont from outside of the Northeast, 19%
- Lived in Vermont, left and returned, 20%
- Have always lived in Vermont, 18%
In-state businesses understand that Vermont is highly perceived from a lifestyle perspective, but that a number of challenges must be addressed before it can be viewed as a positive environment for business.
SWOT ANALYSIS

Strengths
- Natural beauty
- People / community mindedness
- Quality/pace of life
- Focus on natural resources/sustainability
- SizeSCALE/accessibility

Weaknesses
- Taxes and overall cost of doing business
- Government regulations/political climate
- Anti-business sentiment
- Cost of living

Opportunities
- Quality of life/lifestyle
- Green energy/sustainability
- Tourism
- Proximity to Canada
- Natural resources

Threats
- Overall business climate (taxes, regulations, overall operating costs etc.)
- Aging population coupled with brain drain
- Government
- Drug culture/abuse
Opportunities exist to educate internal and external audiences.

1. Businesses currently operating in the state
2. Potential businesses or investors out of the state
3. Current residents
4. Corporate site selectors or real estate brokers who advise executives
5. Tourists/visitors
6. College students
7. Second home owners
8. Former Vermont residents
...a beautiful, quiet, safe, and healthful place to live and work...

...offers a uniquely superior quality of life, a strong community, access to resources, and pragmatic sensibility that make it an ideal place to live and work for those looking for work/life balance.

Amazing lifestyle opportunities coupled with a vibrant/growing creative economy.

Beautiful place to live if you're financially independent.

It’s a beautiful place to visit, however, if you are trying to start a business, run and don’t look back.

...has a burgeoning business development culture with many quiet but hugely successful businesses. Couple that with a vital, culturally rich lifestyle opportunity, the natural resources of lake and mountains, and the opportunities are endless.

...a beautiful, quiet, safe, and healthful place to live and work... opportunities for world-class cultural activities and all sorts of outdoor pursuits.
KEY FINDINGS:
Out-of-State Young Adults
DCI was also interested in obtaining the perspective of young adults (ages 18-25) from outside the state on their perceptions of Vermont as a place to live and work. This audience is important as insights from individuals at the start of their careers and while they are deciding on locations to settle down, can influence how and when they are targeted.

Approximately 217 young adults responded to the survey and are young, well-educated and located primarily in the northeast region of the United States:
- 92% have a bachelor’s degree or higher level of education.
- More than 55% of respondents came from New York, Massachusetts or Connecticut.
- Respondents are well-informed with 68% reporting they are “somewhat familiar” or “very familiar” with the state.

The survey findings reveal that educating this group will be an important component of the state’s efforts. This audience has a very strong association with Vermont as a tourism destination, but there is definitely room to grow the knowledge of what Vermont has to offer potential job seekers and full-time residents.

As mentioned, the top associations these respondents have with Vermont are from a lifestyle perspective. Commonly used phrases to describe the state include “beautiful”, “nature”, “green”, “peaceful”, “laid back” and “friendly”. Despite these generally positive perceptions, young adults are realistic about the potential shortcomings of the state as a place to relocate to and also offer associations such as “remote”, “cold”, “small” and “lack of work”. This translated into a mixed response regarding whether respondents would be willing to relocate to Vermont if a position that matched their skill and salary requirements was offered to them. Approximately 58% of respondents report that they would be willing to relocate to Vermont, while 42% would not be willing to relocate.

In considering the importance of various factors in the decision to relocate, Vermont was perceived as “below average” in several of these factors. Some of the items perceived less favorably include:
- “Alternative job opportunities for yourself”
- “Job opportunities for your spouse/partner”
- “Proximity to extended family”
- “Active social scene nightlife”

Finally, when asked which industries they associate most with Vermont, young adult respondents selected forestry and wood products (82%), tourism (75%), renewable energy (54%) and food and beverage manufacturing (54%) most consistently, while information technology (9%), advanced manufacturing (8%), professional and technical services (4%) and finance and insurance (4%) fell at the bottom of the list. Considering Vermont’s current need to fill jobs in IT and manufacturing, this perception is especially harmful and, by extension, presents a major marketing opportunity.
Respondents are young, well-educated and primarily located in the northeast region of the United States.

- No high school degree or equivalent: 92%
- High School or equivalent: 1%
- Associate’s degree: 2%
- 1 – 3 years of college (no degree): 6%
- Bachelor’s Degrees or higher: 0%
If a job opportunity that matched your skill and salary requirements was offered to you in Vermont, would you relocate to the state?

- Yes: 58%
- No: 42%
Young adults have a very “romanticized” vision of the state as a place in which to live but are aware of its shortcomings as a place to advance their careers (as well as spouse’s career) and its distance from urban centers/family/friends.

- Availability of public transportation: 2.2
- Alternative job opportunities for yourself: 2.5
- Accessibility/proximity to major urban centers: 2.7
- Job opportunities for your spouse/partner: 2.7
- Active social scene / nightlife: 2.8
- Proximity to extended family: 2.8
- Retail/shopping opportunities: 3.2
- Cultural amenities: 3.5
- Housing cost: 3.6
- Housing availability: 3.6
- Quality of K-12 education: 3.7
- Political climate: 3.9
- Recreational amenities: 4.4
Political climate
Retail/shopping opportunities
Proximity to extended family
Availability of public transportation
Quality of K-12 education
Active social scene / nightlife
Accessibility/proximity to major urban center
Job opportunities for your spouse/partner
Cultural amenities
Alternative job opportunities for yourself
Recreational amenities
Housing cost
Housing availability
Overall Rating
Vermont Rating
INDUSTRIES ASSOCIATED WITH VERMONT

- Forestry and Wood Products: 82%
- Tourism: 75%
- Renewable Energy: 54%
- Arts, Media and Culture: 54%
- Higher Education: 48%
- Entrepreneurial Start-Ups: 39%
- Health Care and Life Sciences: 29%
- Information Technology: 15%
- Advanced Manufacturing: 9%
- Professional and Technical Services: 8%
- Finance, and Insurance: 4%
- Other: 3%
PRELIMINARY FINDINGS: Corporate Executives
DCI obtained input from 41 corporate executives with headquarters outside of the state of Vermont, but within the northeast region of the United States. The corporate executive audience had a strong knowledge and familiarity with the state.

- Approximately 97% of respondents have visited the state with the highest percentage visiting for vacation/leisure purposes.
- Approximately 19% of respondents have an existing operation in the state of Vermont.
- 32% of respondents had considered the state for a new facility but of these, only 17% ended up locating the project in Vermont.

Despite the fact that these respondents are more familiar with the state as a vacation destination, the majority were able to rate Vermont on a variety of business location factors. Corporate ratings closely aligned with the results seen in the in-state business survey in that the quality of life and access to government officials were rated highly, as were a number of other factors such as the cost of living, real estate/construction costs, K-12 education systems and available office/manufacturing space.

However, a number of factors were viewed less positively, including:

- Availability of skilled workers
- Competitive utility costs
- Telecommunications infrastructure
- Accessibility to interstates, airports and ports
- Corporate tax rate
- State & local incentives
- Proximity to customers/suppliers

Due to the perceived shortcomings, Vermont is generally perceived less favorably than other competitor states including New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine and New York—which likely contributes to the reason Vermont lands only about half of the projects where it is being considered. These locations are more likely to be considered for future investment by corporate executives. Similarly, the overall business climate of these states (with the exception of Connecticut) is also perceived more favorably than the business climate of Vermont.

Given Vermont’s lack of marketing targeting the business community, there is tremendous opportunity to create the right messaging that will expand Vermont’s profile as not only an outstanding place to visit but to also to operate a business.
- 19% of respondents have existing operations within the state.
- 32% have considered the state for a new facility.

Yes, the project located in VT, 17%

No, the project did not end up locating in Vermont 83%
Quality of Life (Community Culture, Lifestyle & Recreational Opportunities,...)
Access to government officials
Real estate and/or construction costs
Competitive labor costs
Cost of living
Availability of good K-12 education
Available office/retail/manufacturing space
Competitive utility costs
Availability of skilled workers
Telecommunications Infrastructure (cell service/broadband)
Accessibility to interstates, airports and ports
Corporate tax rate
Competitive state & local incentives
Proximity to customers/suppliers

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0

0.0  1.0  2.0  3.0  4.0  5.0
ASSOCIATED INDUSTRIES

- Tourism: 92%
- Higher Education: 67%
- Arts, Media and Culture: 47%
- Entrepreneurial Start-Ups: 44%
- Renewable Energy: 33%
- Finance, and Insurance: 33%
- Health Care and Life Sciences: 31%
- Advanced Manufacturing: 17%
- Professional and Technical Services: 14%
- Other: 11%
- Information Technology: 8%
STATES CONSIDERED MOST FREQUENTLY

- New Hampshire: 56%
- Massachusetts: 39%
- Connecticut: 31%
- Maine: 31%
- New York: 19%
- Vermont: 19%
- Rhode Island: 8%
BUSINESS CLIMATE RATINGS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>State</th>
<th>Rating</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>New Hampshire</td>
<td>3.5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Massachusetts</td>
<td>3.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>New York</td>
<td>2.9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maine</td>
<td>2.8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vermont</td>
<td>2.7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Connecticut</td>
<td>2.5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rhode Island</td>
<td>2.5</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
STRENGTHS

Quality of life
Educated workforce
Location
Business climate

Environment
Natural Beauty

Cost of living
Outdoor activities

Community
Nice people

Government accessibility
Infrastructure

Lifestyle
Education

Land prices
Taxes

Tourism industry
Natural Resources

Recruitment
Weather

Manufacturing

Recreation
WEAKNESSES

- Taxes
- Regulations
- Business climate
- Workforce
- Climate
- Accessibility
- Remoteness
- Socialist State
  - Lower population
- Act 250
  - Liberal agendas
- Location
- High costs
- Small hotels
- Infrastructure
- Small
- High costs
- High costs
- Lack of biotech ecosystem
VERMONT MARKETING EFFORTS
APPENDIX C:
MEDIA AUDIT
DCI reviewed 175 articles in national and in-state news outlets published over the course of the past year (January-December 2015) in order to assess current perceptions of Vermont’s business climate and what is—and isn’t—being written about Vermont as a place to work, run a business, live and raise a family. Political coverage was not included in the media audit.

Of the coverage reviewed, 46% was national, while the remaining 54% was regional. National coverage was the primary focus of our audit, as it sheds light on current perceptions of the state from an outside perspective, with added third-party credibility. Of this coverage, 77% was from what we consider “top-tier” national outlets.

Business was the most common theme at 22%, followed by Economy/Economic Development (16%), Tech (14%), Energy/Sustainability (13%), Tourism/Lifestyle (8%), Marijuana (8%), Opiates (7%), Agriculture (6%) and Quality of Life (6%). Political coverage was not included as part of the audit.

Overall, the tone of the coverage examined was largely positive (57%), while 26% was neutral and just 17% was overtly negative. Coverage of Tech, Energy/Sustainability and Tourism/Lifestyle was the most positive, while coverage of Business, Economy/Economic Development, Opiates and Quality of Life contributed to the negative portion of coverage surveyed.

Of national coverage surveyed, Tech was the most popular (and most positive) topic, followed by Business—which is largely negative in tone—and Tourism/Lifestyle. Of in-state coverage, Economy/Economic Development made up the majority of articles, followed by Business and Energy/Sustainability. Overall, in-state coverage of Business was more positive than national coverage.

Please see the next page for the top five key takeaways from our analysis of top-tier coverage of Vermont over the past year.
Executive Summary – Top Five Findings

Tech Is Your Sweet Spot For Top-Tier Coverage: Tech is the single most popular topic in top-tier coverage of Vermont. Not only that, but the coverage is 100% positive. The media loves that Vermont is both quirky and innovative—particularly when that innovation is related to agriculture, sustainability and other things Vermont is already well known for. Vermont is also becoming increasingly well-known as the home of innovative entrepreneurs and startups to watch.

Entrepreneurs and Startups Are Your Ticket to Media Success: The majority of tech coverage highlights specific entrepreneurs, technologies and startups that are currently flourishing in Vermont. Vermont entrepreneurs like Cyrus Schenck and Paul Bunditz continue to get positive coverage—and fortunately, they align themselves fairly well with Vermont’s “brand.” The key is to harness this to ensure that you never miss an opportunity to tell the Vermont side of the story.

Business Coverage is Largely Negative—Driven by State Rankings. In general, “business” coverage of Vermont in top-tier outlets isn’t easy to find. Of what’s out there, the majority (64%) of that coverage from the past year is negative in tone—while just 9% is positive. Although coverage of company closings, layoffs and high taxes contributed to this, most of the “negative” articles were actually rankings—an area where Vermont traditionally does poorly, or gets ignored. In 2015, Vermont ranked #45 and #42 on Forbes’ and CNBC’s state business rankings, respectively, and 7th among the 10 worst states for entrepreneurs, according to a GOBankingRates study, covered by CBS News. While it’s notoriously difficult to directly “move the needle” on these kinds of rankings, there are ways to help balance this negative coverage. An economic development media relations program for the state would aim to correct misperceptions and highlight Vermont’s success stories in order to balance the overall tone of coverage.

Marijuana is a Hot Topic: With the possibility of its legalization on the table for Vermont, marijuana is a hot topic in top-tier coverage of the state. In fact, marijuana is the third most popular topic in top-tier coverage of Vermont, accounting for 13% of surveyed articles—that’s more than Tourism/Lifestyle, Energy/Sustainability and nearly five times more than Quality of Life. To put things in perspective, this is a hot topic in general, and with Vermont’s strong tourism industry, it’s no surprise that articles like “Will Vermont be the East Coast hub of marijuana tourism?” are surfacing. The tone of this coverage is neutral, with no real “negative” tone, apart from what those who are anti-marijuana legalization might bring to it.

Opiate Coverage is Dying Down, But Still Fairly Prominent: A simple search for news coverage on Vermont in 2014 reveals a swath of articles with headlines like “How Did Idyllic Vermont Become America’s Heroin Capital?,” detailing the state’s battle with opiate addition. In 2015, the coverage seems to have dropped off fairly significantly although it’s still there, accounting for 10% of top-tier coverage last year. That’s on par with Energy/Sustainability, Agriculture and more than three times higher than Quality of Life. While the tone of coverage isn’t overtly negative, given the emphasis on “progress” and how the state is “fighting back,” it remains a bit of a stain on Vermont’s overall reputation.
MEDIA AUDIT: OVERVIEW OF FINDINGS
VERMONT MEDIA AUDIT: BY THE NUMBERS

1 YEAR JAN-DEC 2015

175 ARTICLES

46% National
54% In-State

9 THEMES
NATIONAL VS. IN-STATE

National

Of the coverage we reviewed, 46% was national. The “national” category encompasses all major national newspapers, magazines, broadcast and online outlets, as well as major regional outlets, such as the Boston Globe and the Chicago Tribune. National coverage is the primary focus of our audit, as it sheds light on current perceptions of the state from an outside perspective, with added third-party credibility. Of this coverage, 77% was from what we consider “top-tier” national outlets.

In-State

The remainder of the coverage, 54%, was in-state coverage—or coverage intended for and/or primarily consumed by an in-state audience. Because Vermont isn’t currently heavily covered in national outlets, the inclusion of local coverage was necessary to ensure that our findings are robust. It is important to note that the in-state coverage included in this audit is not comprehensive—we included the articles we deemed most relevant to the overall analysis, but not to the extent that the data can stand on its own as an analysis of the in-state coverage landscape as a whole.
In our exploration of coverage of Vermont as a place to work, run a business, live and raise a family, a number of themes emerged. In order to assess the degree to which each theme was covered, we assigned each article one of nine subjects. Where necessary, we assigned articles a “secondary theme” in order to draw more nuanced conclusions. While not explicitly spelled out in this analysis, these secondary themes emerge as part of larger takeaways.

1. Business: State of Business Climate; Company News; Taxes
2. Economic Development/Economy: Incentives; Infrastructure; State of Economy
3. Tech: Startups; High-Tech; Innovation
4. Energy/Sustainability: Green/Alternative Energy; Conservation
5. Agriculture: Farming; Local Food; GMO Labeling
6. Quality of Life: Healthcare; Education; Community
7. Tourism/Lifestyle: Recreation; Hospitality Industry; Scenic Beauty
8. Marijuana: Legalization; Potential Effect on Economy
9. Opiates: Presence of Drug Addiction; Effect on the State
Of the 175 articles examined, Business was the most common theme at 22%, followed by Economy/Economic Development (16%), Tech (14%), Energy/Sustainability (13%), Tourism/Lifestyle (8%), Marijuana (8%), Opiates (7%), Agriculture (6%) and Quality of Life (6%).
Overall, the tone of the coverage examined was largely positive (57%), while 26% was neutral and just 17% was overtly negative. Coverage of Tech, Energy/Sustainability and Tourism/Lifestyle was the most positive, while coverage of Business, Economy/Economic Development, Opiates and Quality of Life contributed to the negative portion of coverage surveyed.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Theme</th>
<th>Positive Articles</th>
<th>Negative Articles</th>
<th>Neutral Articles</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Business</td>
<td>Business expansion; innovation; progressive policies; sustainability; entrepreneurship</td>
<td>Poor rankings; layoffs; high taxes</td>
<td>Mixed messages on Vermont’s business climate</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Economy/EconDev</td>
<td>Progress in economic development; incentive awards announcements with emphasis on job creation</td>
<td>Poor economic outlook; state economy rankings; debt/lack of funding</td>
<td>Incentive announcements without emphasis on investment/job creation</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tech</td>
<td>Startups; entrepreneurship; innovation in ag/sustainability</td>
<td>List of top startup hubs in every state (Burlington)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Energy/Sustainability</td>
<td>Vermont pioneer in renewable energy; sustainable innovation/practices</td>
<td>New renewable energy standard</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tourism/Lifestyle</td>
<td>Craft beer; recreation; scenic beauty</td>
<td>New York “targeting” Vermont’s quaint image</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Marijuana</td>
<td></td>
<td>Legalization’s impact on state economy; marijuana tourism</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Opiates</td>
<td></td>
<td>Vermont’s “opiate crisis”</td>
<td>How the state is dealing with the opiate problem</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Agriculture</td>
<td>Ag tech/innovation, farm-to-school programs</td>
<td></td>
<td>GMO labeling</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Quality of Life</td>
<td>Healthcare/health rankings; education; community</td>
<td>High taxes; expensive to retire</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Of national coverage surveyed, Tech was the most popular (and most positive) topic, followed by Business—which is largely negative in tone—and Tourism/Lifestyle. Of in-state coverage, Economy/Economic Development made up the majority of articles, followed by Business and Energy/Sustainability. Overall, in-state coverage of Business was more positive than national coverage.
KEY FINDINGS:
TOP-TIER BUSINESS MEDIA
Coverage in Top-Tier Business Outlets

In order to assess the perceptions of out-of-state corporate executives and young professionals, it’s important to understand where they get their information. As experts in economic development and media relations, DCI maintains a comprehensive list of top-tier business and technology media outlets that are, across the board, “most wanted” among destinations looking to place favorable business messaging in the media. These outlets span major newspapers, national magazines, national broadcast media and online outlets and boast a highly educated, affluent, tech-savvy readership that encompasses both senior corporate executives and young professionals.

DCI examined the themes and tone of coverage of Vermont in these top-tier outlets over the past year in order to examine perceptions of the state from a credible third-party perspective, as well as to get a sense for the messaging that these key audiences have been consuming about the state. Here are our top five key findings:

- Associated Press
- New York Times
- Bloomberg News
- Chicago Tribune
- Financial Times
- Houston Chronicle
- LA Times
- Reuters
- USA Today
- WSJ
- Washington Post
- The Atlantic
- The Economist
- Entrepreneur
- Fast Company
- Forbes
- Fortune
- Inc.
- Wired
- Smart Money
- Time
- ABC
- Fox Business
- MSNBC
- CBS
- CNBC
- NPR
- PBS
- Business Insider
- CNNMoney
- Huffington Post
- International Business Times
- MarketWatch
- Mashable
- Quartz
- Slate
- TheStreet
- TechCrunch
Tech is the single most popular topic in top-tier coverage of Vermont. Not only that, but the coverage is 100% positive. The media loves that Vermont is both quirky and innovative—particularly when that innovation is related to agriculture, sustainability and other things Vermont is already well known for. Vermont is also becoming increasingly well-known as the home of innovative entrepreneurs and startups to watch.
The majority of tech coverage highlights specific entrepreneurs, technologies and startups that are currently flourishing in Vermont. Vermont entrepreneurs like Cyrus Schenck and Paul Bunditz continue to get positive coverage—and fortunately, they align themselves fairly well with Vermont’s “brand.” The key is to harness this to ensure that you never miss an opportunity to tell the Vermont side of the story.

Vermont also fared very well in two tech-related rankings released last year; the state ranked #5 among states with the most startup activity according to a study by the Kaufmann Foundation, covered in Fortune, and Burlington ranked #9 among the nation’s most innovative tech hubs, according to a NerdWallet study, covered by Forbes.
In general, “business” coverage of Vermont in top-tier outlets isn’t easy to find. Of what’s out there, the majority (64%) of that coverage from the past year is negative in tone—while just 9% is positive. Although coverage of company closings, layoffs and high taxes contributed to this, most of the “negative” articles were actually rankings—an area where Vermont traditionally does poorly, or gets ignored. In 2015, Vermont ranked #45 and #42 on Forbes’ and CNBC’s state business rankings, respectively, and 7th among the 10 worst states for entrepreneurs, according to a GOBankingRates study, covered by CBS News. While it’s notoriously difficult to directly “move the needle” on these kinds of rankings, there are ways to help balance this negative coverage. An economic development media relations program for the state would aim to correct misperceptions and highlight Vermont’s success stories in order to balance the overall tone of coverage.
With the possibility of its legalization on the table for Vermont, marijuana is a hot topic in top-tier coverage of the state. In fact, marijuana is the third most popular topic in top-tier coverage of Vermont, accounting for 13% of surveyed articles—that’s more than Tourism/Lifestyle, Energy/Sustainability and nearly five times more than Quality of Life.

To put things in perspective, this is a hot topic in general, and with Vermont’s strong tourism industry, it’s no surprise that articles like “Will Vermont be the East Coast hub of marijuana tourism?” are surfacing. The tone of this coverage is neutral, with no real “negative” tone, apart from what those who are anti-marijuana legalization might bring to it.
A simple search for news coverage on Vermont in 2014 reveals a swath of articles with headlines like “How Did Idyllic Vermont Become America's Heroin Capital?,” detailing the state’s battle with opiate addition. In 2015, the coverage seems to have dropped off fairly significantly although it’s still there, accounting for 10% of top-tier coverage last year. That’s on par with Energy/Sustainability, Agriculture and more than three times higher than Quality of Life. While the tone of coverage isn’t overtly negative, given the emphasis on “progress” and how the state is “fighting back,” it remains a bit of a stain on Vermont’s overall reputation.
APPENDIX D:

BRANDCENSUS MESSAGING INTERVIEWS

Brand Attributes & Key Takeaways
We conducted 24 one-on-one interviews:

- 4 Business Owners/High-Ranking Executives
- 5 Influencers
- 3 Entrepreneurs
- 3 Young Professionals
- 3 Visitors (2nd-home Owners)
- 3 Students
- 3 ACCD Stakeholders

Interview Breakdown
Recurring Key Attributes

We collected more than 150 attributes from the following primary sources: planning documents, Immersion Tour conversations and Brandcensus Interviews, and the following attributes were mentioned most often during the interviews:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1) Beautiful landscape</td>
<td>1) Opportunity</td>
<td>1) Access to government</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2) Access to outdoor recreation</td>
<td>2) Pride</td>
<td>2) Collaborative</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2) Overall Quality of Life</td>
<td>2) Diverse Options</td>
<td>2) Entrepreneurial</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3) Sense of Community</td>
<td>2) Rewarding</td>
<td>2) VT Brand Equity (leverage)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4) Safe</td>
<td>2) Relaxes/Casual/Balanced</td>
<td>2) Challenging</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5) Friendly</td>
<td>3) Different</td>
<td>2) Skilled Workforce</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Unique & Meaningful Messages Worth Exploring

1. “Living here is part of our compensation package.”
2. “We’re all in it together. It’s ours to lose.”
3. “Recognition that ‘place’ and ‘celebration of place’ are intertwined.”
4. “The lines between living, working and doing business here are blurry; it’s a different way of defining quality of life, work compensation and business profit. It’s all about embracing our differences—here you can live differently, work differently, lead/govern differently, profit differently.”
5. “The great thing about doing business in Vermont is that you get to live in Vermont.”
6. “Vermont is what you make of it.”
7. “Vermont is where your actions can actually make a difference.”
8. “Vermont is a truly different place.”
9. “Vermont isn’t for everyone, but it certainly is for you if ____________.”
Other Relevant Comments

1. “We need one primary marketing message that works for both Chittenden County and the rest of the state.”
2. “The undercurrent of anti-business sentiment is harmful to marketing efforts.”
3. “Connecting with young professionals is key to our economic growth.”
4. “There is an overall lack of awareness of the range of good jobs available in Vermont.”
5. “There is a philosophical resistance to growth that is frustrating.”
6. “Vermont is anti-business in the same way that Apple is anti-technology.”
7. “Tourists are an opportunity for us to expand our audiences.”
8. “People move here, not businesses.”
9. “Position Vermont as a lifestyle brand.”
1. If Vermont were an animal, what kind of animal would it be?
   - Bobcat
   - Catamount
   - Draft Horse
   - Goat
   - Golden Retriever
   - Moose
   - Mule
   - Turtle
   - White-tailed Deer
2. If Vermont were a vehicle, what kind of vehicle would it be?
   • 1930s Farm truck
   • Land Cruiser
   • Land Rover
   • Prius
   • Subaru
3. If Vermont were a famous person (athlete, entertainer, artist, politician, etc.) — from any time in history through the present — who would it be?
   - Abraham Lincoln
   - Bernie Sanders
   - Deane Davis
   - Henry David Thoreau
   - John Muir
   - Jon Krakauer
   - Laura Ingalls Wilder
   - Peter Pan
   - Robert Frost
   - Robert Redford
BUSINESS OWNERS
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Business Owner/High-Ranking Exec</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Live</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Safe — Wonderful place to raise a family.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seasonal — Work and life both vary according to the seasons.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Business Owner/High-Ranking Exec

Live

Community — People feel like they’re part of something; Great schools; Safe place to raise a family; You can be a big fish in a small pond.

Work

Rewarding — There is a lot of opportunity. (We’re always looking for truck drivers, and we offer good pay and benefits, and the routes are safe and beautiful.)

Do Business

Access — To all levels of government.

Local Support — Buy local is a real thing—millenials put their money where their mouths are, provided that the quality is there.

“VT is a truly different place.”

“My sons won’t take over the business, because they want to live in a vibrant center (they would live in Burlington, but not Springfield.)”

“We need workers, and immigrants can fill that need.”

“We are a recognized industry leader in what we do, the way we’re doing it, and what we stand for.”
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Safe — Great place to raise a family.</td>
<td>Pride — The folks who work here take pride in what they do, and demonstrate a high work ethic day in, day out.</td>
<td>Brand Equity in VT — Vermont is a great place to do business if you can genuinely align your brand with the Vermont brand. (Leverage the VT brand.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Healthy — The outdoors are safe and offer many ways to lead a healthy lifestyle.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Open — The landscape; the sense of uncrowdedness.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

“VT doesn’t ask anything of you, it just constantly gives.”

“As we grow, we need a qualified workforce to help support our growth.”
Business Owner/High-Ranking Exec

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Different — It’s different in VT; VT isn’t for everybody and that’s ok.
Clean — Environment and politics.
Safe — Low crime rate.
Uncrowded — Communities, schools, and streets aren’t crowded. | Different — As a VT worker, you can earn differently—part of your compensation is that you get to live here. | Different — As a VT business, you can “profit differently”—part of your profits is that you get to live here. |

“The lines between living, working and doing business here are blurry; it’s a different way of defining quality of life, work compensation and business profit. It’s all about embracing our differences—here you can live differently, work differently, lead/govern differently, profit differently.”

“The great thing about doing business in Vermont is that you get to live in Vermont.”

“Vermont is anti-business in the same way that Apple is anti-technology.”
INFLUENCERS
Influencer

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Intimate — Small vibrant communities featuring friendly people and opportunities to engage in local affairs.</td>
<td>Industrious — “Of your devices.” You can carve something out for yourself, you can avoid being pigeon-holed, you can create your own job diversity; Taking initiative is valued here.</td>
<td>Entrepreneurial — Growing (“trending”) sectors (examples: value-added agriculture, advanced manufacturing, technology, tourism). Opportunity — The VT brand is so strong; opportunities to leverage the VT brand.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

“There is an overall lack of awareness of the range of good jobs available in Vermont.”

“The problem of workforce availability is best addressed by retaining and recruiting young individuals and families.”
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Quality of Life — Good schools, relatively safe, access to outdoor recreation.</td>
<td>Opportunity — There are a lot of great companies in Franklin County (emphasis on manufacturing), and we they need a skilled workforce.</td>
<td>Best Workforce — Creative, ingenious, committed—whatever it takes to get the job done. Proximity to Canada — We back up to the Canadian border so our success is based on that. (Access to the US private market, and Federal Government opportunities.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“Some employees working in manufacturing here, are asked to solve problems in facilities located out-of-state.”</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“We will benefit from an influx of workers.”</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“Franklin-Grand Isle Workforce Investment Board” is a great tool for economic development.” (Adult education and training for employment skills and upgrades. Customized training for employers. Classes geared toward giving adult students the education needed for improved career aspects.)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Live</td>
<td>Work</td>
<td>Do Business</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>--------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>--------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>--------------------------------------------------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Arts — Thriving community arts scenes across the state.</td>
<td>Diverse — There are so many interesting jobs here in the non-profit sector.</td>
<td>Challenging — “It’s hard to get Vermonters to come out and enjoy the arts, often for geographical (travel) reasons.”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Small State / Big Culture — So many small towns that are completely formed-every town has a “town hall” and/or “community center” thing going on.</td>
<td>Small Scale / Big Opportunity — The scale is small, so something you do can have impact.</td>
<td>“Tourists are an opportunity for us to expand our audiences.”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Live</td>
<td>Work</td>
<td>Do Business</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>------</td>
<td>------</td>
<td>-------------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Community — A place where somebody will help you; A great place to raise a family; There are many opportunities to get involved.</td>
<td>Beautiful Commute — Scenic vistas instead of factories, and uncrowded.</td>
<td>Entrepreneurial — There are a lot of young entrepreneurs here doing a lot of exciting things in such areas as beer, spirits, food, technology….</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Outdoors — So many accessible options-something for everyone.</td>
<td></td>
<td>Supportive — If you need help figuring something out, there are a lot of people keen to help you—including government, associations, chambers, colleagues, academic, etc.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Friendly — Most people are happy to be here, and it shows.</td>
<td></td>
<td>“People move here, not businesses.”</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Influencer

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Authentic — People and community.</td>
<td>Opportunity — To have a meaningful impact on your life and community.</td>
<td>Access — To government-at all levels; To the Vermont brand caché.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Beautiful — Open landscape.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Unique — Downtowns and village centers.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

“We need people to bolster our workforce.”

“We need one primary marketing message that works for both Chittenden county and the rest of the state.”
ENTREPRENEURS
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Access — 1) To the outdoors: any season, any day, any time. 2) To the facilities at Middlebury College (athletic/recreational).</td>
<td>Access — To a powerful community of young, high-energy engineers.</td>
<td>Access — 1) To a supportive business community that came before us. (Example: the founder(s) of Dealer.com have invested in Faraday.) 2) To the facilities at Middlebury College (co-working startup hub space).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“A great place to frolic.”</td>
<td>“Living here is part of our compensation package.”</td>
<td>“We’re all in it together. It’s ours to lose.”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“We’re an ‘opt-in’ state.”</td>
<td></td>
<td>“If every company would take on an intern(s)...”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Live</td>
<td>Work</td>
<td>Do Business</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>--------------</td>
<td>-------------------------------------------</td>
<td>----------------------------------------------------------------------------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Beautiful — Outdoor recreational opportunities abound.</td>
<td>Hard, but worth it — When you make it work here, you gain access to our great outdoors.</td>
<td>Equity in VT brand — If what you do is somehow wrapped in the Vermont brand (independent spirit, nature/environment, artisanal quality, etc.), you can do very well here.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Safe — Great place to raise a family.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

“There is a philosophical resistance to growth that is frustrating.”

“Finding competent employees is difficult.”
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Beautiful</td>
<td>Balance — Lovely (beautiful) place to work, offering a lot of independence and opportunities to connect with the land.</td>
<td>Spirited — There is an intrepid community of creative thinkers.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rural</td>
<td>Accommodating — Flexible work schedules so people can juggle multiple jobs.</td>
<td>Challenging — It’s not always easy, but it sure is worth it to get to live here.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Calm</td>
<td></td>
<td>Collaborative — Willingness to connect and help problem solve—we’re all in it together.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Friendly</td>
<td></td>
<td>Access — A lot of support from the government.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

“If you can find work here, you can find happiness in Vermont.”

“Well will we have access to a workforce when we grow?”

“Lack of access to capital.”
YOUNG PROFESSIONALS
Young Professional

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Quality of Life — Outdoor recreation and culture (food, arts, entertainment).</td>
<td>Pride — Part of something special; “Pride is at the cornerstone of how we market ourselves;” “The fact that I can make a living here is a matter of pride.”</td>
<td>Collaborative — Other like-minded organizations are keen to partner.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

“Being a Vermonter means having fiercely independent values.”

“Recognition that ‘place’ and ‘celebration of place’ are intertwined.”
Young Professional

Live

| Honest/True — The Vermont grass-roots vibe is real and practical. |
| Beautiful — The physical environment. |
| Creative — The people here have an independent spirit that fosters creativity. |
| Access (urban) — It’s nice to visit NYC and Boston when the mood strikes. |

Work

| Opportunity — If you work hard and enjoy what you’re doing, you can start something here—something small can grow big. |

Do Business

| “Many Vermonters have a low opinion of the state.” |
| “It’s expensive to live here.” |
| “Vermont is not as purposefully geared for your enjoyment as some other states (example: North Carolina).” |

| “Job security is a major concern.” |
| “You need to be brave to work here and squeeze your way in.” |
Young Professional

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Outdoors — It’s beautiful here, and accessible.</td>
<td>Could not name any Vermont-based technology companies.</td>
<td>“If I was ready to be entrepreneur, Vermont is where I’d be.”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Great Food — Farm-to-table, craft beer, etc.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seasons — Diversity of four seasons, and all that offers.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Quality of Life — Culmination of above.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
VISITORS / 2ND-HOME OWNERS
Visitor/2nd-Home Owner

Resides full-time in Boston; part-time in VT

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Beautiful — Landscape.</td>
<td>Depressed — Not enough to go around; Folks need to work 2-3 jobs to make ends meet.</td>
<td>Inconsistent — Businesses that are exposed to the nuances of seasonality.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Peaceful — Your mind is clear of craziness in Vermont.</td>
<td>Casual — Laid-back attitude is common.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

There are two sides to Vermont—the haves and the have-nots.
Visitor/2\textsuperscript{nd}-Home Owner

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Beautiful — One of the most beautiful places in the country; Not overbuilt—development and historical preservation id done right.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Interesting — Varied things to experience. So many people doing so many interesting things with food and farming.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Spiritual — As an artist, you can get to a different level of your soul in VT.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

“I would like to live in Vermont full-time. I have connections with the people here, and the seasons.”
Visitor/2nd-Home Owner

Resides full-time in Boston; part-time in VT

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Beautiful  —  Stunning year-round setting.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Access  —  To the outdoors, and all that it offers.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Balance  —  The people, the lifestyle, the environment—feel happy here.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

“Vermont is home because of the quality of my life here.”

“My goal is to work more, from my home in Vermont—I’d like to work ‘here’ between 50-70% of the time.” (Real estate developer, specializing in high-rise urban development.)
STUDENTS
Student

Originally from CT, UVM graduate, moved to Colorado after college, now back at home in CT earning course pre-requisites to go to graduate school—never thought about staying in Vermont post college.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Cozy — UVM (Burlington) was the perfect size—big enough to meet new people on a regular basis, and small enough to run into a lot of familiar faces. and historical preservation id done right.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fun — Good bars, music, beer—a good vibrancy.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Outdoors — Access to nature.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

“Just passing through, a great place to pass though—great experience for a college student. Burlington is a right of passage for college-age people.”
From CT, Saint Michael’s College graduate, currently residing in VT and working various jobs while attempting to gain full-time employment in the ag field.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Community — Sense of support and positive spirit.</td>
<td>Tourism/Foodservice — Relatively easy to get work in the tourism and foodservice industries.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seasonal — Work and life both vary according to the seasons.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

“Vermont is where your actions can actually make a difference.”
Born in VT, currently a senior at a VT High School, attending Stanford University (CA) in the Fall of 2016 (School of Business).

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Beautiful — Landscape.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Down-to-Earth — Environmentally aware.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Home-grown Fun — Music, food, beer, art.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

“Open-minded about returning to VT some day post graduation, and would likely live in Burlington to be among other young professionals. (Moving to an urban center like Boston or Washington DC is, however, more likely.)”
ACCD STAKEHOLDERS
ACCD STAKEHOLDER

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Community</td>
<td>Diversified</td>
<td>Access — Our smallness means that you can access all levels of government, including the highest levels, when you have issues.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>— Clean, green, safe, healthy, friendly, concerned, active.</td>
<td>— Many small businesses providing a wide variety of work options.</td>
<td>Location — Situated to close to several major US and Can cities.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Networked — Our small size makes networking easier.</td>
<td>Lifestyle — Our quality of life is a good lure that businesses use to attract workers.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Skilled Workforce — Our education system produces a highly skilled workforce.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Incentives — We have a suite of tool to help attract and retain businesses.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

“Come for the quality of our __________, and stay for the quality of life here. (Tourism is a great door opener.)”

“Vermont isn’t for everyone, but it certainly is for you if, … ”

“We need marketing messages that work for the entire state.”
ACCD Stakeholder

| Access — To outdoor activities and recreation; To vibrant out-of-state urban centers (examples: Hanover, New York, Boston). | Interesting — High-functioning professionals doing remarkable things in many sectors. | Passionate — The people doing business here, truly want to be here. | Quality — High-end/high quality products and services. |
| Refreshing — Awesome commute (vistas vs. traffic jams); Low exposure to panhandling; “I can see the stars at night.” | | “The undercurrent of anti-business sentiment is harmful to marketing efforts.” | “Connecting with young professionals is key to our economic growth.” |
ACCD STAKEHOLDER

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Live</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Do Business</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Easy Access — To all levels of policy and decision-makers.</td>
<td>Easy Access — To all levels of policy and decision-makers.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Workforce Quality — Educated and dedicated workforce.</td>
<td>Workforce Quality — Educated and dedicated workforce.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Living in VT — Vermont is a great place to live and work.</td>
<td>Living in VT — Vermont is a great place to live and work.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>“Vermont is the perfect place for the right kind of business. (example: light carbon footprint – not a smokestack industry but, rather, light-manufacturing and service-oriented companies.”</td>
<td>“Vermont is the perfect place for the right kind of business. (example: light carbon footprint – not a smokestack industry but, rather, light-manufacturing and service-oriented companies.”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>“Relatively moderate tax burden.”</td>
<td>“Relatively moderate tax burden.”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>“Factors like energy costs and financing costs cycle in and out.”</td>
<td>“Factors like energy costs and financing costs cycle in and out.”</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
INFOGRAPHIC VIDEO PRODUCTION TIPS

The use of infographics in both print and video continues to be popular because this communications tactic works.

Research and data confirm that people retain 95% of a message when they watch it on video, compared to 10% when they just read text. With this in mind, here are some tips to help produce an effective infographics video.
Like all business-to-business advertising, it is important to provide useful information and promise a meaningful benefit. The objective is to inform your audience about your situation with the use of data—teach folks something new and of value, simply.

Determine what you want the major takeaways to be, and include purposeful calls-to-action that align with your communications objectives.

The video needs to have a story arc — example: 1) Problem 2) Solution 3) Call to Action

No data, no story. Infographics are only as good as the data you use. So, if you’re using external, third-party data, be sure to double-check that it's valid and to also check the sources.

Proprietary data is much more powerful. Don’t forget to credit all your sources in the video. This proves the credibility of your data and offers the audience the interactive opportunity to dig a little deeper.

Be laser-focused on which data points matter and what key points you really want to make. Analyze the data to identify a trend, key insights, or something unusual or counterintuitive. Translate numbers into meaningful insights for your audience.

Got the data, but what’s the story? Raw data on its own – even in the most beautiful visual representation – will not engage your audience. It’s the story behind the data. Once the "story" has been identified, use the facts and data to support your points and to validate your conclusions.
Most viewers decide if they’re going to watch the full video within the first 10 seconds, so the opening scenes and content will determine the success of your video. To sustain viewer engagement, make the pace and temp snappy, don’t repeat yourself, don’t dwell on any one point for too long, and keep the information flowing. The pace needs to be fast enough to feel purposeful, and slow enough for the information to be processed. The length should be between 1.5 and 2.5 minutes. (How do you get more people to finish watching the video? End it sooner!)

Sketching the story out on paper, whether in the form of a storyboard, timeline or other representation, will save you time on actual production, as well as provide you with a check on length. (If your “preproduction” deliverable looks too long, consider going back and cutting some content before you begin production.)

It's important to view animated infographics as videos first, rather than as a series of charts or a PowerPoint presentation.

The best video infographics use content-appropriate visuals and effects to support the meaning of the data. For example, if a piece of information is about the relative size of earth and the sun, use perspective and camera movements to accentuate the message you want to convey (Earth is tiny).

Sound design is important because it helps support the telling of the story. Include music, sound effects and voiceover narration to help maintain and focus viewers’ attention, set the tone, and control the pace. Voiceover also helps humanize the data, and narration serves as a guide, walking the viewer though the situation.

It is important to note that the video needs to work with and without sound. Type and data need to be presented in a way so that they communicate what you want, without audio.

Be mindful to not overproduce — i.e., too much emphasis on graphics, and not enough focus on information.
DISTRIBUTION

- The video needs to reside somewhere that viewers can easily link to, download, and share. Once your video infographic is completed, you can embed it on your site, share it on social networks, and export it to YouTube, Vimeo.

- People love sharing good infographics videos via social media because it makes them look savvy, so be sure to regularly promote the video and link in your social media playbook.