Revolutionary War Patriots

The Revolutionary War (1775–1883) was our nations’ fight for independence from Great Britain to establish a new country with a government based on equality, justice, and humanity. Patriots left farms and homes to take up arms to protect their families and fight for a new way of self-governance. The stories are many and varied but their goal was in common. These soldiers came from all corners of what would become the State of Vermont.

As many as 350 Patriots are buried in Chittenden County including Gov. Thomas Chittenden and militia leader Ethan Allen.

This marker honors and remembers the known and unknown Revolutionary War soldiers and patriots who sacrificed their lives and homesteads for this endeavor.
