

frauds, thefts, abuses, discrimination, wrongful death in my family"). As was the case in his earlier appeals, the petitioner is unable to demonstrate any relevance of these claims to any specific action by any Department in the Agency of Human Services.

ORDER

Based on the prior decisions of the Board and the Vermont Supreme Court, the petitioner's present appeals are dismissed, as a matter of res judicata, as failing to demonstrate that his claims have any relevance to any action taken by the Department affecting any application for or receipt of assistance or services. 3 V.S.A. 3091(a).
