

The case came before the Board on June 2, 2010. The current evaluation is germane to whether the petitioner continues to pose a risk to children. The Department's attorney had no objection to remanding the petitioner's case for further consideration by the Department.

OPINION

The petitioner's case is remanded to the Department for further review and consideration of whether the petitioner's name should be expunged from the child protection registry. As part of its consideration, the Department will review the current psychological evaluation as part of their determination.
