Comment: Vermont added the number of children who moved within the state whose families did not reenter EI services after their move to the number of those children who were 'withdrawn by parent.' Vermont tracks the numbers of children who move within the state to another region. When this occurs, a referral is made to the new region where the child resides. Parents sometimes do not choose to reenter in EI services in that new region. Therefore, the State categorizes this as "Withdrawal by parent (or guardian)". We had a turnover in Data Managers between the preceding year's data submission and this year's data submission. The Data Manager had not left Standard Operating Procedures related to the 618 exiting data submission and our data validated that these families did not meet the State's criteria of 'attempts to contact unsuccessful' as these families did respond to contact, but their response was to indicate they no longer wanted EI services. When Vermont compared the data of those who "moved within the state" added to "attempts to contact unsuccessful", we see a total in the "attempts to contact unsuccessful" similar to preceding years. In fact, the quality review of Vermont's data indicates a significant drop in "attempts to contact unsuccessful" synchronous to the significant increase in "withdrawal by parent (or guardian)". This is, therefore, directly attributed to the change in Vermont's categorization of "moved within the state" as meeting the definition of "withdrawal by parent (or guardian)". Vermont has developed standard operating procedures for this categorization to be followed for future data submissions.
